The 1925
YACKETY YACK

VOLUME 35

Published Annually by the
PUBLICATIONS UNION of the
UNIVERSITY of NORTH CAROLINA
Chapel Hill + North Carolina

Foreword

THE play is the same. The lights flicker at times; there are more supernumeraries back-stage; there is quarreling over make-up in the dressing rooms; the stars give way at intervals to understudies; out front, hisses leaven the applause; but all in all it is the same old play.

Herein we have tried to picture faithfully the play, as the past year has seen it enacted at the University. If we have failed, our much labor accepts only the censure merited of inability. If we have succeeded, we seek no praise, we desire no commendation—we have only accomplished that which we set out to do.

DR. HARRY WOODBURN CHASE
President of the University of North Carolina

Dedication

TO Walter—called Pete—Murphy, whose loyalty to his Alma Mater has never called in an expert accountant to estimate costs; whose services of high sacrifice in behalf of popular education, high, low and middle, in the Legislature of North Carolina have been outstanding as a feature of the great progressive movement that has advanced this State to the forefront of the American sisterhood; who at all times has cheerfully and intelligently responded to every call that the University has made on him, and has called around between assignments to ask for other tasks, whether trivial or of great import; this, the 1925 YACKETY YACK, is dedicated with the hope that it will in some degree bear witness to the prideful affection of a mother for a stalwart and devoted son.

Thornton Shirley Graves

Thornton Shirley Graves was not widely known to the Student Body. He had been with us scarcely more than one student generation. He was not prominent in student or Faculty activities. His class room was not crowded. Until his death, many were unaware of the extent of his reputation as a scholar. Yet those students who were carrying on advanced work under his direction—and they were among the most able of all our company—need no assurance of his great gifts; and those of his colleagues who knew him, realized the pervasive influence of his ideals of scholarship, and were heartened thereby. To become, while still comparatively young in years, one of the half dozen acknowledged masters in this country and abroad in his chosen field in these days of highly-specialized knowledge, is an accomplishment which few attain. That this was his rightful place, testimony is not wanting to prove.

Yet I have never known a man more completely indifferent to every art by which fame is courted. I have not yet compiled a complete bibliography of his writings. When this is done, the mere list will astonish those who thought of him only as a teacher who seemed to know quite a bit about the history of the English drama. His learning was amazing in extent and exactness. He was quick to recognize solid work; skilled in pointing out the essential quality of a book; devastating in the irony with which he blasted some piece of charlatanry and pretense. Yet in exposing the superficiality and insincerity that he loathed, as in the praise of that which deserved praise, there was no pretense. He was as simple and unaffected as a child. Honest work, even if not brilliant, he valued.

One might give many instances of his rare combination of sturdy intellectual honesty, self-forgetfulness, and forthright truth. I have wondered, in the last few days, why we knew so little about his experiences in the Great War. We know the external facts: he saw three years' service, from 1917 to 1920. I know that he rose to a captaincy, and that he won more than local fame as a sharpshooter. I believe he had medals from three governments, but I have never seen these medals, nor did I learn of them from him. He never talked about the war or what he saw and did. I did not need to know, for I knew the man. On his way home he stopped in London and added more books to his library. He loved to hunt for old books, not merely through catalogues or on display shelves, but in cellars, in barrels and dust-covered boxes. His judgment of book values was as unerring as his judgment of scholars. He collected, not to possess but to use. So completely was his knowledge organized that he could call upon it at will, sometimes in ways quite unexpected. This eager interest in matters of technical scholarship was his outstanding characteristic. When he lay mortally sick, he asked that a parcel of books that had just come from London be opened, and a certain book be brought to his bedside. In this book he expected to find evidence on a point of interest, and the passage was read to him, "dead from the waist down."

"The Grammarian"—the old humanist term somehow leaps to mind as I think of him—indifferent to fame and recognition, recognition and fame were seeking him out. He was the scholar, working, like Browning's hero, as though man has forever, indifferent to the worldly or practical value of what he wrought, eager only for the truth, contemptuous of the arts which often obscure the distinction between the intellectual dabbler and the man to whom the great word "scholar," of right belongs.

WILLIAM BORDEN ABERNETHY

Chapel Hill, N. C.

Degree: A.B.

Age: 21

Σ Φ Ε.

WILLIAM Borden Abernethy, yes, that is "Billy" or "Bozo." We fell heir to him because he lives in Chapel Hill, in fact, right on the campus. He is a man of various activities, all of them interesting to him and some of them to the Co-eds. Billy is more at home on a ballroom floor than any other place we know of, and yet he is always saying that he can't go to a dance on account of his studies. But when the music starts, Billy is usually there, though the dance be far away or near. Billy is a most accommodating and agreeable chap and his worst fault is doing things for others.

We understand that Billy is going to study Medicine and we feel sure that he will make a success as a physician because of his sympathetic interest in others. And so, to you, O School of Medicine, we send a man that we are sure will bring you great credit in the future.

FRANKLIN LE VERNE ADAMS

Rowland, N. C.

Degree: A.B.

Age: 21

Robeson County Club, President; N. C. Club; Philanthropic Assembly, Business Staff YACKETY YACK; "Prunella" Cast.

TOOTIE" is one of the finest fellows we have ever known. A thorough gentleman, a most delightful companion, he likes nothing better than to join in a talk-fest with others who have like interests. He does not care to be in the limelight, but is ever willing to do his part for a worthy cause.

Always carefully dressed, always neat, with a smile for his friends and a nod for his acquaintances, he has passed his time among us in such a warm-hearted way that we feel a sense of loss—a pang of regret—now that he leaves us.

Determination, consistency of effort, a strong will, purpose—these are the elements of success, and it is because he possesses them in abundance that we predict a bright future for "Tootie" in any profession he shall choose.

LEWIE WHITAKER ADAMS

Andrews, N. C.

Degree: B.S. Commerce

Age: 21

Α Κ Ψ

BEYOND the highest peaks of Western Carolina's mountains lies a region famous for its stalwart youths and rugged men. From that section of the Old North State, Dame Fortune wrested Lewie from the arms of his fair companions and sent him to us.

Words and pictures are inadequate to portray our classmate as he really is: a scholar after Dr. Murchison's own heart; a friend whose cheery smile and jolly laugh are forever chasing away the gloom as an Airedale chases a kitten; a pal of the true-blue variety; a chap with character that stands four-square, combined with ability to "deliver the goods"; in all, the kind of a boy that we'll proudly point to in years to come as a fellow member of '25 and a real Carolina man.

Reluctantly and yet joyfully we give Lewie up, to let him completely fulfill the dreams of some queenly maiden who awaits him, and then to continue the journey on his detourless highway to success.

ELBERT DWIGHT APPLE

Reidsville, N. C.

Degree: B.S. Medicine

Age: 21

Tar Heel Board; Dialectic Senate; Y. M. C. A. Cabinet, Senior Class Executive Committee; Elsha Mitchell Scientific Society; U. N. C. Medical Society; Student Assistant Library; President Rockingham County Club; Treasurer Y. M. C. A.; Assumption Editor Tar Heel, Vice-President and President Dialectic Senate.

Ε Φ Δ; Α Κ Κ.

THERE are very few men in the University who can take Medicine, hold a position in the library, serve as President of the Dr. Society, and find time to mix in other student activities, yet this versatile young man from Reidsville has.

Elbert does not have a single enemy on the campus. His unselfishness, moral character, and great sincerity cause all those with whom he comes in contact to love him. He is not ambitious for a great career, but his spirit of "good will" and his continual efforts to be of service to the other fellow is going to make him a most successful M.D. wherever he locates.

E. D., with his winning smile, has a way of making the girls fall for him that causes his friends to envy him. We predict matrimony for him as soon as he finishes his medical course.

We wish to remember you, Elbert, as the best of friends. May the greatest of success crown your efforts in life.

JULIAN GRAVELY BLACK

Madison, N. C.

Degree: A.B.

Age: 21

Rockingham County Club, Dialectic Senate

⊕ P.

AND now we come to "Kaiser" Black, whose genius for sleeping is unique, yet who can upon occasion display as much energy as the busiest go-getter on the campus. To look at his physiognomy, one would never dream that he holds a state-wide reputation as a ladies' man. Nay, we should say national, for ever since last Summer School there has been a soft spot in his heart for Memphis, Tenn. From the amount of time that he spends studying Spanish, one might imagine that he is planning new conquests in foreign fields. We hate to think of losing him, but our loss is the world's gain. Perhaps in later years we shall say among ourselves, "We knew him when—".

MERLE D. BONNER

Aurora, N. C.

Degree: A.B.

Age: 23

Monogram Club; Philanthropic Assembly; Committee Student; Activity: Committee "1927"; Committee Awards Three and Four; President Athletic Association; Commencement Ball Manager; Dance Leader (4); Golden Fleccc, Freshman Baseball; Varsity Baseball (1, 2, 3), Captain (4); Varsity Football (2, 3, 4); Wearer of N. C.

Σ X

RAB" is the one who changed the ambitions of most of the future citizens of Aurora (a certain East Carolina town, not Bori Alice). These worthies will now tell you they have definitely decided not to be policemen or cowboys—they are going to Carolina to play ball like Dumont. Whether it is baseball or football, matters little to them, and so with their mentor—he is equally at home behind the line or behind the bat.

We are told that "Rabbit" got the name for being fast, but authoritative information is lacking as to whether this applies to other fields than Emerson.

Though he is probably the most outstanding athlete in his class, his activities and honors are by no means limited to that field. He has dabbled in campus politics, led dances and has exposed himself to Horace's brain twisting, et cetera. Affable, courteous, modest to the proper degree, we predict for him success at his calling—he says it is Medicine.

HOYT WINFIELD BOONE

Greensboro, N. C.

Degree: A.B.

Age: 22

Dialectic Senate; "13"; Carolina Playmakers ('23-'24); Fourth and Fifth State Tours, German Club, Guilford County Club; Freshman Baseball; Freshman Basketball; Assistant Leader Fall Dances

Π Κ Φ.

ROONEY," as he is known all over the world, has a cordial greeting and a friendly smile for everyone he meets, and it's lots in his favor. He made himself nationally known and justly famous during his Sophomore year when he toured the Old North State as a Carolina Playmaker. Would that you had returned the next year, "Rooney," because we feel that it's your calling. However, you chose to work a year in the Gate City and we lost you until this past summer. Really, "Rooney," wasn't it because of "Her," rather than your work, that you stayed away?

"Rooney," as a parting word to you, let us predict for you a great future full of sunshine and smiles. No clouds too high for you to reach; no crowd too stately to refrain from laughing at your wit, no human being too intellectual or too dumb who does not see in you a thing that we all want but very few achieve—Personality. "Rooney," you have it—it's your greatest asset, so keep it if you would but obtain your goal in life which, of course, we know to be Wealth, Health, and—"Her."

FRANCIS MCGEE BOUSHALL

Raleigh, N. C.

Degree: A.B.

Age: 21

Freshman Friendship Council; Secretary Freshman Debating Club; Philanthropic Assembly; President Wake County Club; Assistant Manager Varsity Tennis; Junior Ring Committee; YACKEY YACK Board; German Club; Committee "100."

FRANCIS is the fifth of a noble line in the history of the University. He follows close in the footsteps of his brothers who not only mastered the Sciences and Philosophy but came in for their share of social honors. All this Francis has nobly carried forward. Quiet and unassuming he has taken a high place in the hearts of his fellow students.

His record at Carolina has been above ninety; which is evidence of his scholastic ability. He takes an active interest in all campus activities, especially those where the welfare of the University is concerned. Above all the material things he has accomplished he is one of the best-liked men on the campus. Scores of his friends wish him good luck in the game of life.

RICHARD LOUIS BRAWLEY

Mooresville, N. C.

Degree: A.B.

Age: 22

HAIL to the man from Mooresville. That is undoubtedly the one town abounding in men talented and ambitious. Louis is not the invincible cosmopolitan, but the man of sound character and alertness of mind cherished by all College men. His ever-ready C. P. wit is the delight of the Chemistry Laboratory. The friend, the comrade and the man's man; that is the man you see above.

His hair vouches for his firmness, his fingers mark the scientific man. These two qualities assure us that he will be a success as a doctor. And we look with pride to the coming four years which will give us back this fellow whom we must now send on the journey among the shadows of dead creatures, so that he can later in a most beneficial manner contribute his bit to humanity.

To this man without a fault (for he has no nickname), we shall whole-heartedly say "Godspeed."

FRANK LATHAM BRINKLEY

Plymouth, N. C.

Degree: B.S., Chemistry

Age: 21

Δ Σ Φ.

GOVERNOR" joined us in our Sophomore year after leaving the College of the City of New York and the bright lights of Broadway. His ability in his work soon placed him among the leaders of his class, and even in his Senior year he has flunked some of the best of the Freshmen.

Brink's not only a good student but also makes friends easily and quickly. If he can only set his heart in one place and keep at his good work there is no end to what he will accomplish. We look forward to our budding scientist and the discoveries he will make.

IRA LEE BROWN
Winston-Salem, N. C.
Degree: B.S., Commerce
Age: 28

Forsyth County Club, A. E. F.; A. F. and A. M.

OF the many men we have known on the campus here, there is none who can quite equal Brown in true manhood and the sincerity that goes with it. Honest, loyal, fair and, above all, plain-spoken, he has made a place for himself in the hearts of hundreds who know him that one might well envy.

But let it not be supposed that his merits are only appreciated by his student acquaintances. He is the only man who ever dared to address the daddy of the Commerce School as "Doc," or to tell Prof. Matherly what he thought about his courses—and still retain their friendship!

Now, some think he's so thoroughly worldly and businesslike, that Cupid ne'er his heart could pierce. But, O Mabel! There's plenty of evidence to show that Winston-Salem still has its attractions for Brown.

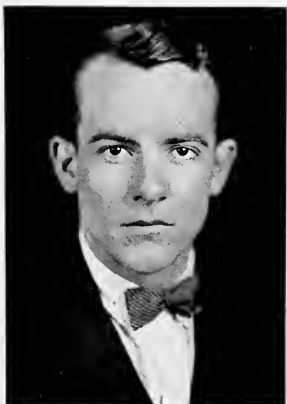

We wish you luck, Ira, and with it wealth, health and happiness, which are the just rewards of virtue.

WILLIAM BENJAMIN MOYE BROWN
Greenville, N. C.
Degree: B.S., Medicine
Age: 21

A. T. Ω.

BILLY" entered with the regular class in the Fall of 1920. He first made a reputation as a student, but as the years rolled by he neglected all but German, and now, consequently, is well versed in that language. "Benny," his latest acquisition in nicknames—acquired by his ability in pitching horseshoes and playing basketball—is a champion in both sports. His intentions are at present to enter Medicine, and we are sure that he will make a success. He takes an interest in everything and is a splendid worker. He has been a most loyal and devoted friend and will be sincerely missed by those who return next fall. It looks as if the future has plenty in store for him and we wish him the best of luck.

WESTON BRUNER, JR.

Laurens, S. C.

Degree: A.B.

Age: 21

Gym Team (2, 3, 4); Monogram Club, German Club

Π Κ Φ.

WESTON Bruner, better known as "Wes," gets his diploma with a high scholarship record behind him. He has not only been a student but a man entered in many of the various activities. He has been Doc. Lawson's right-hand man at the gym where he won his N. C. in '23. "Wes" loves Carolina so much that he will adorn the campus three more years to get his LL.B.

Here's to you, "Wes," we know you will give the Republican Party, Hell!

GEORGE GILMER BUCHANAN

Greensboro, N. C.

Degree: Ph.G.

Age: 24

Guilford County Club, American Pharmaceutical Association

DRUGGISTS, beware! When "Buck" receives that diploma, with Ph.G. designating his degree, the North Carolina druggists will have more competition than they ever received before from one man. He uses his left hand always, but that does not mean that he can't roll pills to perfection. Unlike most University students, affairs of the heart play a very limited part with this young man. He entered here in the Fall of 1922, but for unknown reasons finished in the Class of '25. This does not mean that it took him three years to finish the Pharmacy course, but he had to stick around his home town one year before returning to complete his studies in Person Hall.

We don't know where "Buc" will settle with his drugstore and force, but wherever he decides to locate, we can only predict a drop in business for the other druggists of the lucky town.

ANNIE BOYD BULLOCK

Bullock, N. C.

Degree: A.B.

Age: 21

ANNIE Boyd is one of the corps of Scotch daughters that Flora McDonald College has sent to grace the campus this year. A true Presbyterian at heart, steadfastness, thrift and precaution have been her watchwords. How else could one account for her favorite poem, "The Recessional," except by precaution?

However, her smiles are not regulated by proverbial Scotch thrift, but shed on all alike. In fact, her warm disposition must have lowered her kindling temperature since one morning while standing in front of the fire she found herself all ablaze. Her efficient roommate extinguished the flames in time to save venerable old Roberson House from a conflagration, not to mention Annie Boyd herself. May she ever survive any calamity in equal safety.

NELLIE BURGESS

Old Trap, N. C.

Degree: A.B.

Age: 23

Woman's Association

NELLIE is one of the kind of people who are always ready to help, and never worry whether they will receive credit and praise commensurate with their efforts. The time she has spent at Carolina has been full of work of all kinds; with plenty of attention to recreation as well as to her studies.

She is consistent, studious and interesting. She will certainly make a success of whatever she attempts if she works with the same enthusiasm she has shown here.

THOMAS ROY BURGESS

Elkin, N. C.

Degree: A.B.

Age: 21

JOSH," as he is known to his many friends on the campus, came to us with one object in view, and that was to prove to us that big feet are not a criterion of succeeding or failing to pass "Dean Howell's" course in Pharmacy.

Burgess is of the kind that is slow but sure. He has that great asset (ability) which is sure to win him success if he will use it right, and we believe he will. He has won the friendship of many while at Carolina and is liked by all who have come in contact with him.

The ladies are aware of his winning personality, and as a result the fairer sex seek the light of his brown eyes.

His many friends are wishing for him much happiness and success in his career as a druggist and feel sure that the best of life is in store for him.

JOHN HARRINGTON BURKE

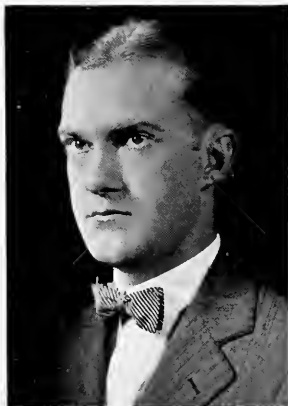

Taylorsville, N. C.

Degree: A.B.

Age: 22

Wrestling Team, Dialectic Senate.

J. H." is an all-round man, a good friend and a pleasant companion. He is popular with all those who know him, and has the admiration of both students and professors. There will be many who will hate to see him leave Carolina, but they know that by reason of the good qualities he has shown here he can make a great success of anything he chooses to do out in the cold, cruel world.

FRANKLIN DANFORD BURROUGHS

Scotland Neck, N. C.

Degree: B.S., Commerce

Age: 21

Manager Varsity Wrestling Team, Philanthropic Assembly, Halifax County Club, Vice-President (2), President (1), Freshman Basketball Squad.

Φ K Σ.

DAN Burroughs is one of those well-poised individuals who is just as certain to enjoy life as he is to succeed. Dan is quiet and minds his own business as well as any member of the class. Some even think that he is non-communicative, but those fortunate enough to number themselves among his close friends know better.

A few times Dan has been accused of joining the boys in a "Bull" session, but on the whole he has had little time for pedigreed nonsense and bunk; rather, his major quality is a fine strain of loyalty and sincerity that begets confidence. He comes from Scotland Neck, but the name of the town should not be counted against him for it has turned out plenty of other good men. We don't know what line he is going to follow—and we are not sure that he does himself—but we are sure of one thing, that whatever he does, he will do it quietly and well.

FRANKLIN DAVID CALDWELL

Matthews, N. C.

Degree: B.S., Commerce

Age: 21

FOUR years ago, a quiet, sturdy lad released the plow-handles, unhitched Old Beck and told his pa that he was going to the University of North Carolina to get an education.

To-day, he leaves us, but what a change! He has discarded the characteristics of his early rustic life. His polished manners and his sheik-like appearance would make you think he was a member of Fifth Avenue Society.

"Caldwelder's" philosophy of life is very unique. He is somewhat reserved in manner; he never goes outside his path to make a new acquaintance; but if once his "reserved" shell is broken, he will be a friend to the last. His speech is the drawl of an ultra-Southerner, but every word he says is full of meaning and directly to the point. He thinks more and says less than the average student.

"Caldwelder" has spent the major portion of his time in Saunders Hall. He is a bull shark when it comes to manipulating an adding machine or deciphering an intricate problem in finance or Business Law.

Caldwell's chosen profession is Accounting. He is also counting on getting a wife and giving her a position in his private office. He says two heads are better than one.

THOMAS BARNES CAMPBELL

Taylorsville, N. C.

Degree: B. S., Commerce

Age: 23

CAMPBELL is a practical sort of fellow with a spontaneous sense of humor; serious when seriousness is needed, and sincere to a degree that makes us consider ourselves lucky to list him as an intimate friend. Although believing that intelligence should be recognized, he is no champion of the social aristocracy, and admires a snob about as much as a cat enjoys a swim.

While more practical than most, and making an excellent record in studies, he is not too practical to let textbooks interfere with education. Numbering joke books among the others, and having an exceptional ability to remember witty phrases, he is always ready to come at you with some irresistible squib.

Campbell is interested in business and expects to make Commerce his life's work, believing that two birds in the bush are worth more than one in the hand, provided you go after them with the right method—and T. B. generally uses the right method. We don't predict him any great future, for, knowing Campbell, such is unnecessary. He doesn't expect to hang around the door waiting for Opportunity to knock, but to go out after it and drag it in by the tail.

H. MARTIN CARMICHAEL

Durham, N. C.

Degree: B. S., Commerce

Age: 20

German Club, "Coop", Minotaurs, Gimghous; Assistant Manager Varsity Baseball (2); Manager Freshman Basketball (3); Manager Freshman Baseball (1); Boxing Club (3); Assistant Manager Carolina Playmakers (4)

Δ K E: Pan-Hellenic Council.

MARTIN is the greatest financial wizard of the University. We figure he has made over ten thousand dollars while engaged in acquiring more knowledge to go with the genius of business ability which he has. He is equally at home whether it be at a University function, the World Series, the smart occasions from New York to Palm Beach, or a business trip to Chicago.

It is also reported that he spends quite a bit of his time in Norfolk; in fact, every weekend, trying to form a partnership. Mart's a true friend with a heart as big as his line. We predict a great future for him in anything he undertakes. As a business man, student and friend he will always be remembered and respected by the Class of 1925.

CLEON MOORE CARTER

Charleston, W. Va.

Degree: B.S., Commerce

Age: 21

Σ Φ Ε.

THIS was the man who went with Pearl to the picnic. He lets nothing worry him. The "business man" from Philadelphia was not indifferent as to his own pleasures. He studies them; he hunts for new ones; and he tries new tricks on the old ones.

"Chunk" is the only man in recent years who has had the pleasure of taking a drink on the steps of the Confederate Capitol. The V. M. I. game is always incidental to this annual event.

Ladies—well yes. No, he is not a married man. He will never allow any limitations to be imposed on his conduct. He has refused to marry better-looking girls than he will ever again get a chance to marry.

But seriously, "Chunk" studies hard. He knows how to study and get through with it. Efficiency, that's it. It will take him far in the world. With his level head, his savoir faire, and the fact that he knows how to get what he wants, he will make his mark in his chosen profession. Banking it is, and he has made a good start already.

DOUGLAS CARTER

DOUG" is an authority on Victor records, dance orchestras, and the latest fox trots. Come to think of it, though, we have never seen him at a dance down here, and we cannot help but wonder why. We are sure he dances, but then it seems as if he never does. There were only a few to get on the first make-up of the Dean's List, and we are glad to say that "Doug" was one of them. He deserved it if anyone did. He is not a bookworm, but his name is generally found on the Honor Roll. "Doug" is not an athlete, either, but he is an ardent fan and a loyal supporter of all the Carolina teams. We would hesitate to call him a woman-hater, but we really don't believe that he takes very much interest in woman-kind. We never hear him raving about the Sweet Briar, St. Mary's, or Salem girls, or any other girls, for that matter. With his natural talent and love for arguing, we are sure that he will make a successful lawyer, and his host of friends on the campus wish him the greatest possible prosperity and success. "Doug" is a darn good fellow, from every standpoint, and we don't care who knows it.

BY his outspoken nature, and simplicity of manner, Tom has won for himself a host of friends and admirers at Carolina. Even casual acquaintances know him as a fine fellow while a more thorough knowledge of him reveals an original and winning personality which is hard to beat.

Besides the inherent good qualities which he brought from Asheville, four years ago, Tom has acquired a love for, and a knowledge of, literature and art, clinched by a two months' trip through Central and Southern Europe which make him a boon companion and a fascinating conversationalist.

By dint of the above, and a very congenial nature he has become quite a "social lion" at Carolina. His place in the "Dekes" will be hard to fill, to say the least.

After due consideration we predict that Tom will make his mark in the world in whatever field of work he enters. Indications seem to point to Journalism or Business at present.

FOLLOWING the precedent set her by two of her beloved professors, Elizabeth also has shown discretion in adopting the Old North State, although she pretends her favorite tune is "Carry Me Back to Old Virginy."

We have heard that she is taking a Hard course in music for the purpose of expressing in musical composition her appreciation in Carolina. Elizabeth really is versatile, and whatever she undertakes she does well. She is artistic as well as musical, and we predict for her a rosy future in designing coats-of-arms for family trees. WITHIN a class there must be mediocre people, yet they are never written up without the most enthusiastic and extravagant praise. So when it happens that a man like "Bill" Cocke is to be written up, who is really one of the few outstanding members of the Class of '25, it is hard to give him the praise he deserves and merits without becoming ridiculously extravagant in order to make the write-up sound different.

That he has served as President of the Student Body, that he was tapped for the Golden Fleece in his Junior year and that he has been the President of Phi Beta Kappa show that he has received the highest honors that one can achieve here.

A student in the real sense of the word, a dependable and efficient executive and a writer of no mean ability, Bill is a person from whom we expect not the ordinary "great things" which are expected from the members of the extraordinary Class of 1925, but unusual things. His success here is indubitably indicative of his work later.

NORMA came to Carolina from Peace, and during her two years and two Summer Schools here she has been one of the most popular of the Co-eds.

Dr. Odum spotted her the first quarter and we understand that she is going to make the world safe for democracy by going into social work. Work is Norma's middle name, anyhow, for she can do more in less time than it takes most of us to get started. She works for everybody and anything and always comes through with that "smile that won't wipe off." With it all she can go shooting off around the country on case-work, take in a dance or so, and run off a few reports before morning to appease a few of the profs.

According to several admiring swains, her eyes are her chief attraction. They have been variously described as "pools of blue light," "marbles stuck in cotton," or "awfully soulful." Anyhow, they seem to be most magnetic, to judge from the appearance of her date book, for she is popular with every one who has had the good fortune to know her.

COLE" is one of the most universally-admired men in the whole Student Body. A short time ago he was only a homesiek Freshman among the many; today, he occupies a place in the hearts of his fellow students which only few men ever attain. In recognition of his high ideals and admirable work he was elected President of the "Y" last spring, and those who have been associated with him in this work are thoroughly convinced that he has proven more than worthy of his trust. However, he is not only successful in executive circles, but one will find him on the roster of Carolina's most popular athletes.

As one of the crack pitchers on the Varsity nine, "Cole" has a mean habit of slipping them over so fast that the other side can't see them. Dame Rumor would have it that some "fair one" is serving as a guiding star for all of his achievements. For this we cannot vouch. But aside from all of his accomplishments or why he has been successful, we can say that here is a noble, true, big-hearted idealist who is inspired with a broad vision which is bound to carry him to success in his life's work of service to his fellow men.

LIKE his Brother Cottontails, which squirm through the briar patches of Chatham County, has Cooper squirmed through his College course, without getting scratched by "E's" or "F's," and without deviating from the beaten path to graduation. At the kick-off he chose Electrical Engineering as his profession, and the fervor with which he has followed his course does him credit. Cooper says little but studies faithfully, and ranks high in the estimation of his classmates.

Cooper is a veritable magnet to the weaker sex. He has graduated with honors from two Summer Schools, and we have record of several broken hearts. Just which of his personal qualifications make him so distinctive to the ladies we do not know; it may be his smooth blond hair or it may be that smile in his blue eyes. Whatever it is, we would like to know the secret.

Cooper is specializing in the field of Illuminating Engineering, and we predict with assurance that he will ably light his way to success.

IN the realms of Davie Hall, where King Froggie reigns supreme over his zoo, and medical and other neophytes toil away in an endeavor to ascertain what makes a frog croak in the springtime, a crayfish "put 'er in reverse" at the approach of adversaries, or how to correctly skin a cat—in these realms, Dan is a court favorite. Here he served the King faithfully, for which he was made, not an habitue of the lions' den, as was Daniel of old, but keeper of the royal frogpond and, finally, the King's own cupbearer, locally spoken of by the natives as the assistant in Zoology. Dan made the mistake of going to Davidson at the outset of his program of higher education, which technicality spoiled his chances for Phi Beta Kappa. This is by way of insinuating that Daniel "knows his stuff." Sincere, affable, studious, we predict he'll be another Mayo for he aspires to be a surgeon.

Rufus is especially inclined toward nature and its effects. Although not prone to booting his profs, we might state here that he and Professor Koch harmonize and understand each other mighty well as shown by the number of courses taken under him.

To the outside, Rufus may seem wrapped up in his faithful old pipe, and especially the "Pick," but to his close friends it is well known that a young lady in the West is the supreme dictator of his heart and actions. HERE is a man with whom it is a privilege to be associated, and this privilege is much appreciated by those who know him. After completing academic studies at Randolph-Macon he sought the path leading to Chapel Hill and joined us with the Pharmacy Class of 1925.

Dave is an example of modesty, and seldom do we find one so neat in appearance, so reserved, or so careful in manners. He considers silence as a great art of conservation of energy, but however quiet he may be, he never fails to make friends with all, as he has a most pleasing personality.

He is unquestionably a good student, for he passes most of his work in a very creditable manner. However, all of his time is not spent with his books. One of his great hobbies is dancing and he has mastered that art most gracefully.

NEAT in appearance, courteous in manner, efficient in work—these are the qualities that characterize this gentleman from Pitt and cause him to be respected and esteemed by all those who know him. Few men in the Class of 1925 have touched the life of the University in so many points.

The "Squire" first became known by his ability to successfully withstand the hectic days of Bull Greene's Spanish Class. Since then he has been variously identified as a newspaper man, debater, member of the Grail member of the Class Executive Committee, dance leader, politician, fraternity man and last but not least, ladies' man. This wide range of experience along with quite a bit of careful studying is now enabling him to digest some of the subtle fineness of Horace William's philosophy.

His associates, his likes and dislikes, and his amiable personality prove him to be of sterling character and true worth. He is studious. During his four years in the Engineering School "accuracy and dependability" has been his motto, and judging by his marks he has lived up to it.

There is a great contrast in his work and play, for in his "affaires des coeur" they say he is quite fickle. Nevertheless, his girl friends think he is "just fine." He has proven himself to be a good scout, thoroughly capable of delivering the goods when Dean Howell's quizzes come due. His chief hobby, however, is waiting for the morning mail to bring the glad tidings.

Truly we can say that he is immune to the common evils found on The Hill except the Pickwick. We might also add here that every Sunday finds him an earnest listener to what the parson has to say.

Harland is so filled with Pharmacy that it has been said that he can recommend a remedy for every ill known to man. This may not all be true, but he has the ability to accomplish whatever he decides and wants to do.

He used to tell us the name of the little town and just how many great men had been born there, but now when the question of his nativity is brought up he says, merely, "from the mountains." It has always been a mystery how he ever obtained such an accurate knowledge of just how much work each course in the University demands for passing. Before I forget it, never ask "Dunk" to sing, for the noise that he makes when he tries will ruin even iron eardrums. DOC" is another one of those Greensboro guys whose time at this University has been hastened up in the study of pill-rolling in Dean Howell's quarters. Although it takes only two years to complete the course of Pharmacy, he could spend only one year here before he spent another in Draper. It is not known whether it is drugstore work or those Draper damsels that continually call "Doc" to that little city, but it is known that when not in school he spends most of his time there rather than in his hometown.

Any member of the Pharmacy Class can point out numerous good qualities but his bad ones are few and far between.

Were it not for the "Pick," the "Orphum" and the ladies, "Doc's" grades would be much farther up the alphabet over on Miss Noble's books. There is no doubt that after he has passed the N. C. ENLOE, or "Cato" as he is more affectionately known is a specimen of what we commonly call a Southern Highlander. He hails from the region of the tall and uncut, usually referred to as "The Land of the Sky."

"Cato" is one of the many titles which he possesses; however, this one fits him best because he is not lacking in the qualities of a great Statesman. These Statesman-like traits have caused "Cato" to take up and study Dean Carroll's arts of Business and Banking. This he has mastered with great success, putting it into practice many times during his stay at College.

We predict that "Reg." will some day be a great financier and all the papers will carry his name as head-line material. And it will only be a question of time before he will be a member of a great triumvirate with America's greatest magnates.

"Reg." never neglected the other side of College life. He was always present when anything was happening, from a football-scrimmage to the biggest social function on the campus. Although he never attended a Summer School, he knew as much about the ladies as old Kipling himself.

THE "Sir" of the period when "knighthood was in flower," was the reward for the man who made possible proof of his skill by hours of relentless training. To-day, no title can convey the honor which we place upon "Hick" when we characterize him by a statement not deserved by a great number of the so-called male sex, or wearers of the breeches, namely, "a man in every respect."

"Hick" is unusually persistent in his work, and that his efforts have been fully rewarded is evidenced by the look of complete satisfaction which passes over his face during exams from the realization that he will "hit" the prof so hard as to make him look like Andy Gump stricken with Saint Vitus Dance and rheumatism at the same time.

This member of our class has, by his persistency, together with a smile which we have never seen replaced by a frown, and with a disposition worthy of a Carolina man, placed himself in a position in our esteem which enables us to say that in this classmate we are giving to the business world a man, with everything that the word implies.

TO be rather than to seem to be," is Marvin's motto, and we admire him for it. Quiet, unassuming but ever ready with a cheerful word or gay bit of wit, he has entangled himself in the hearts of the many who know him. And although he has chosen Business as his life's work and developed the cigar habit as a necessary prerequisite to success as a big-business man, he has not yet adopted the hard-boiled attitude toward the rabble that we usually attribute to the type. In fact, it is well known about the campus that his frequent trips to Greensboro would indicate a soft heart, and explain, perhaps, the far-away, dreamy expression which he wears on Monday mornings.

He is a good fellow and true, honest and fair and handsome. With these qualities he cannot fail to succeed in anything he undertakes.

He is full of life and cheerfulness, and that girl of whom he talks so much in his sleep, would certainly be a foolish female to turn down such a good man.

Paul has a valuable spirit of determination which never allows him to leave a task before it is completed, and well completed at that. In choosing Engineering as his life work, he has but justified that spirit in him which takes joy in helping his fellow man and his country.

Paul's favorite pastime is counting bugs in the sanitary laboratory, where he and George Ausband are entrusted with the responsibility of furnishing the University and the town with potable water. FEAGAN'S career at the University was interrupted, following his Freshman year in 1920, and the next year he taught school, but now we have him finishing with us in the Class of 1925.

At one time he leaned rather heavily toward the Law, but eventually avoiding her sinewy wiles, he now intends to make the instruction of the youth of the Tar Heel State his supreme sacrifice.

"A. A." has proved himself a good student, and takes to historical and Anglican subjects as a duck does to a mill pond, but the languages and "Feag" have no compromise ground, and he stoutly maintains that his aversion for all Dago linguistics is a deeply-rooted growth.

WE have here, as a member of our class by adoption, one of the oldest inhabitants of the Academic School and one of the most popular.

"Pass" entered in the Fall of 1917, when (according to report) men were men, and milk and honey, bull and other things flowed freely. He immediately went out for several activities, making an excellent record in football. In the Spring of 1920 his health forced him to leave us for several years. During his absence he made an enviable record by becoming for a year the only "Co-ed" at Salem College. What is still more noteworthy, he was asked by the president to return and finish his course there.

Since he re-entered Carolina, he has distinguished himself by very successfully passing probably the hardest academic course available, and by proving to the world-at-large that he has a line of bull and hot air rivaled by none. "Pass" has done more than that however, and during his stay with us has shown himself to be a gentleman in the strictest acceptance of that term. Of no man can it be more truly said than that he has been tried and been proven a "thoroughbred."

CAROLINA will never forget a certain spring day in Greensboro when a slender red-headed Sophomore, just eighteen, took his stand upon the hillock at Conc Park, dealt out four scattered hits of the scratch variety and sent the Old Dominion nine back to Charlottesville in stinging defeat. It is a well-known fact that the said lad is none other than the above named. Since that time, "Bill" Ferebee, or Willoughby Dozier, as you prefer, has been the terror of opposing baseball teams throughout the South. Last year, "Bill" could not pitch regularly and did not equal his record of the preceding season, but Carolina supporters are looking to him for great things as the mainstay of the hurling corps this year.

But "Bill's" athletic ability is not limited to baseball. He is recognized as one of the outstanding basketceers in the Intrafraternity Basketball League, and it is whispered all over the campus that he can beat a race-horse handling horseshoes.

It is unnecessary to tell you what sort of a man Willoughby is. A clean and upright person, a good fellow, a good student, and—oh well! What more can you say about a guy?

BUD," as he is known to most of us here on the campus, came here from the University of Delaware at the close of his Sophomore year. After attending two Summer Schools in a manful effort to get off some of the required work that he lacked for credits in the B.S. Commerce Course, he came to be fairly well known to us; perhaps through some of the girls who attended the Summer Schools while he was here. At any rate, some of us at least know him and of his tremendous difficulties with the French Courses given in the Commerce School. "Bud's" great ambition is to be a salesman, and from the general looks of things it seems as though his hobby is or will be—automobiles. If such is his interest we will say that he is picking a very good field in which to prove his endeavors. "Bud" seems to be a sort of quiet, reserved fellow, but he always has a cheery word for those he meets upon the campus, and he can always be found right in the midst of things when there is any fun going on. We wish him success in whatever he may venture into after he leaves us and feel sure that his present ways will be of some value to him in that respect.

LOUIS is a Connecticut Yankee from the watchmaker's town, Waterbury. After attending New York University he came South to complete his education in the Carolina Law School, as he intends to establish himself in the Old North State.

"Fish" became a member of the North Carolina Bar last year and practiced his profession in Chapel Hill for a period.

He is well liked by all who know him and has entered with real zest into the life of the Law School while a citizen of the Carolina campus. Incidentally, he was instrumental in bringing to the Law School a third National Legal Fraternity, thus giving this school the three principals of the American Law College Triumvirate.

No, we won't accuse him of being a ladies' man, but we do strenuously repeat that he is a Bold Knight in the Lands of Flapperdom.

WHEN a man goes to a University and pays most of his expenses by working at different things, and at the same time maintains an average in his class-work to be aimed at by the best of students, you have a person to be admired, respected, and a man who has spent his time well. Garner fills all of these requirements and goes a great deal further.

He came to this University from Oak Ridge Institute, and found the Mathematics Department his field of clover and his ambition. Thanks to his conscientious efforts, many a man has passed the slough of terror, namely, Math I, under his guidance and coaching. His work along this line will never be forgotten, and it is the hope of every one who knows him that he will some day realize his ambition—to become a second Einstein or write a math book. In spite of these recommendations we will remember Garner as a man who spent his time well in the University—a real friend and a good fellow.

"LAWYER" is a real one in every sense of the word. If steadiness and promptness mean anything in the practice of the Law, Ballard is sure to reach an eminence in the profession he has chosen for his life-work.

Not only has "B. S." applied himself with distinctive success to his studies but during his final year he has opened up a partnership on The Hill and hearsay has it that each day there stands an impatiently-patient waiting line just outside his office portals.

In the recent case of State of North Carolina vs. Blackman, he eloquently defended the prisoner and his cross-examination tore such enormous gaps in the State's wall of evidence that "Lawyer" emerged completely triumphant.

In all campus activities in which he has shared Spruill has made his voice a power to reckon with, and he enjoys the utmost confidence and respect of his classmates, having served as President of the Third Year Law Class in his final year.

"HOOT" hails from Scotland County, the land of three C's—Corn, Cotton, and Cantaloupes. During his sojourn here he has made an enviable record, both as an athlete and as a student. He is not a believer in the common expression "never let your studies interfere with your College education," but he does think that in order to be a real all-round sport, one must put forth his energies in various fields, both physical and intellectual. He holds down right-field on Coach Bill's baseball team, and he is a crack hit whenever it comes to a showdown.

Besides his athletic ability, "Hoot" possesses all the admirable qualities of a student. He takes to history, government, and English like a real scholar. GILREATH is neither all student nor all sport, but a happy medium between the two. The night life of his youth has served him well, for he can study all day and all night without showing the least sign of fatigue. The wee hours of the morning usually find him experimenting in the laboratory or in the parlor of some young lady. He is a very apt student in Pharmacy and has become one of the pets of the department. His spare moments from work and social life are spent in the lab, making and using cosmetics. This serves him for a twofold purpose; he beautifies himself, and then the ladies fall for this "novel of the beauty parlor." It is rumored that he is experimenting, in his beauty course on the ladies of Chapel Hill and Durham.

But student and sport are not all when you speak of "Lon." He is a knock-out when it comes to cards and hot air, and he does stunts in the gym with the grace of a Greek god. This has won for him the much-coveted N. C.

Here's to you—student, sport, athlete, gentleman, and friend—may you find in life the same spirit of good will that you show at all times.

Regardless of what is in store for Glenn, whether it be easily reclining in the "Chair of Dead Languages" at his Alma Mater, or training the youth of his native land, we shall always remember him as a true friend and pal, and we truly wish for him the best that life can offer.

GOODSON hails from that well-known County of Lincoln which occupies the unique position in history of being both mother and sister of several counties. The eyes of his county are surely upon him, because his record at the University has been one of which the entire State might be proud.

He is of that group about which you never hear much. In fact, he is the champion "non-fuss" raiser on the campus. Never seeking an office, and never ostentatiously occupying the spotlight, he has breezed through four years here and made a distinct hit with the students. Always willing and ready when called upon, whether helping out at a class smoker or haranguing the Lincoln County Club, the contributions he has made to campus life have been wholesome.

Tall and distinguished-looking he is; a favorite with dreamy-eyed maidens; indeed, there is a persistent rumor on the campus that one of his "many" has captured the heart of this prince of good fellows. In any case our words of farewell are "good-by and good luck."

Clean-cut, handsome, thoughtful, of retiring personality, he is the embodiment of principles which make him one of those who, though little seen, are long remembered—one of those rare creatures whom we look upon as future leaders.

FREEMAN Grant is living testimony of the fact that "you can't keep a good man down." First entering the University in January, 1910, he has had a sporadic career both as a student here and in spreading the gospel of learning to North Carolina's youth. Grant is a man of principle, and he gave up his last charge out in the wilds of Beaufort because he would not renounce his belief in man's evolution from a lower state. In his four years at Carolina, Freeman has been a special student most of the time, having tried Pre-Med, B.S. in Chem., and A.B., his last love. "Ulysses" has long been a familiar figure in chemistry and botany labs, and take it from us, he knows his stuff. Something unusual is the fact that in his several summer terms here he has made higher averages than in the regular session. We're speaking of classroom work. However, in the memorable weekly struggles at Bynum Gym his presence has been felt by many a Summer School girlie. We'll remember "General" Grant as a quiet, good-natured chap who is as sincere as the day is long.

But Carolina finally prevailed.

EDWIN came to the University with a family reputation to uphold. His father and brothers had left enviable records as students and judging from the respect and esteem with which he is held by his classmates, Edwin leaves one equally as good.

Edwin has identified himself with many phases of College life. In the beginning he was a promising candidate for the football team, but was selected to manage the Freshman football team, his Junior year; thus he was forced to abandon his actual participation in this sport. Possessing, however, the qualities of a stickler, he became a candidate for the team in his Senior year, and contributed materially to its reserve strength.

There is hardly any activity in which Edwin cannot interest himself. He is a delightful companion and a thorough gentleman. Both in and out of the class room he is the personification of honor and integrity, and stands unflinchingly by the truth as he sees it. In a word, Edwin is one of the most respected and highly esteemed members of the Class of '25.

"SHORTY" comes to us from Gastonia, "The textile center of the world." He is of the persevering, steady type. Whether it is an assignment in his studies, or a problem in life he sticks with it until the objective is attained. Can he work? We should say so! Just ask any member of the class what happened to those laurel bushes at Camp Sapphire when "Shorty's" machete got in the midst of them. It is these characteristics together with that of a broad, cheerful personality that have brought to him the respect of his professors and the high esteem of his classmates.

Although the word demanded by the Engineering School does not allow much time for campus activities, "Shorty" has managed to find time to play football and to wrestle. Also these studies have tended to limit his natural social inclinations, but nevertheless he is frequently seen at the occasional dances which occur at The Hill.

It is generally conceded that it is not within the knowledge of man to predict the future yet we are sure that if "Shorty" keeps going as he has started out he has little to fear when he strikes the world for a living.

In his acquisition of knowledge, he has never neglected the social side of life, often being found on the dance floor or "discovered" in Raleigh. We feel safe in saying that there are many members of the fairer sex who will testify that "Grif" has attended two Summer Schools. Not that it was necessary for him to stay, for his ability to make "A's" in the School of Commerce has won him an assistant instructorship. Having the ennobling faculty of performing his duties as they should be done, and yet catch a "Pick," every day, he presents an unusual character.

AFTER spending a year at Trinity, "Bill" migrated to Carolina and we have been much better off for the move. Quiet and reserved, he has made no outward display of his sterling qualities. Only those with whom he was closely associated realized that in him are embodied the traits of a true Southern gentleman. Honesty and dependability are the words around which "Bill's" career at Carolina have been moulded. He has not been a bookworm, for he believes in the theory that all learning lies not between the covers of a book.

Socially, "Bill" has come into his own. No society function at Carolina is complete without the presence and smile of "Bill" Hadley. Not much is known of his "affaires de coeur," but he has been known to receive sweet-scented letters from different parts of the State. CARRIE is truly one of those persons whom one on better acquaintance grows to like immensely. After browsing around the serene and vapid Guilford and Elon campuses for several years, she turned to Chapel Hill as an ideal place wherein to study the modern juristic commentaries.

Carrie has enlivened many social affairs with her presence while on The Hill. She has made all blend in wonderfully with her studies, and this year secures her legal degree with her husband.

For no longer is it Carrie Edmund, the Law Co-ed, but Mrs. Bill Hannah, the young lawyeress. Carrie recently passed the State Bar and will some day hang out the old shingle in the mountain village, Waynesville.

And in truth it can be stated that since Carrie's entrance into the Carolina Law School she has won many friends among the young lawyers and would-be barristers. Our former prejudice against Law Co-eds has been overcome and she has had much to do with it.

TUCKER finishes his eventful stay on The Hill this year with the time-honored double degree; the A.B.-LL.B. His time spent in the Law School has been productive of many fruitful results. Whereas most young barristers take unto themselves the Law, alone, "Bill" went them one step further and added a consort.

Although majoring in Matrimony and Domestic Relations, he has not neglected his minors and has proved himself an earnest thorough Law student and a firm believer in constructive social life. He is well liked by all his friends, and they are numerous.

"Bill" has what we choose to term sagacity and discretion in all things legal, and his client's cause will never suffer because of the lack of these two sterling qualities

IT is with the greatest difficulty that we attempt to conjure a fitting eulogy for one with a career such as has been that of L. S. Harrison. From the lowest order of Pharmacy—a soda-jerker—he has attained by leaps and bounds the enviable throne of a Graduate Pharmacist.

When it comes to the fair ones and light wines—well—what do you say, Bo? He favors them both and believes that some day light wines and beers will take their rightful places in the hearts of the American people.

But Louis would not appreciate the conomen in the least, for in spite of his reputation as a social dog and leader of dances, he is decidedly one of the "retiring and modest members of the Class of 1925."

He showed his good judgment in choosing Carolina in preference to the Colleege in his old home town, being a native of Raleigh. If his judgment continues consistently good, he will most certainly make a success in life.

ONE sunny afternoon in the Fall of 1921 several hundred students got off the Carrboro, Limited and made their way slowly toward the University campus. Among this group was Henry Clifton Hart, a Freshman. To him at first the pathway of education must have seemed long and difficult, but he has stepped along it with a determination and persistency which allow no defeat.

Early in his course, "H. C." became attached to the gods of Mathematics, and he has been a devoted worshiper ever since. Besides mathematics, physics, mechanics, chemistry and the bull education courses are his favorites.

OBJECTIVELY, this young gentleman is destined to lead an unhappy life: He despises a fool; he loathes contact with ignorance; he is an enemy to cant and dogma; he knows that the library of life is more than the Bible and a cheque-book; he prefers H. L. Mencken to Harold Bell Wright. Subjectively, fate has in store for him, happiness, and for the same reasons.

Brilliant, persevering and sure-footed he has cut his own way through the miasmic swamps of College life and achieved for himself individuality and personality. He has a considerable number of true friends; mainly because he has not sought them. He has the admiration of all those with whom he has allowed himself to become intimately acquainted—the opinions and beliefs of the rest (as far as he is concerned) do not matter.

JOHNNY" is one of the few true-blue, dyed-in-the-wool ladies men. He takes as naturally to the ladies as ducks to water. And the happy side of it is that the ladies enjoy John Leonard as much as John Leonard enjoys the ladies. However, these are not the only species that enjoy this laddie, for he can entertain any gathering of boys that get together, with jokes, puns and, above all, a mouth-harp, with which he can "make a panta squall." His two faults are that he talks in his sleep and passes off five courses in one quarter. Don't be alarmed at the solemnity of his brow. He is a darn' good boy in spite of his dignified face.

HERE we have a student of unquestioned merit who is at the same time a writer of no mean ability. "Mary Cal" has trailed nonchalantly through all the star courses in the English Department and walked away with Phi Beta Kappa grades. All this seems to have come without any seeming difficulty.

Then, too, she can write, and not only write well but constantly and on short notice. Rarely in the last two years has there been a copy of the Magazine which has not contained at least one article, sketch or short story of hers. Her work was one of the mainstays of the Magazine during the dark, belated and unfruitful days of 1924-25.

With all her accomplishments in literary lines she found time to serve on the Student Council of the Woman's Association and to assume the responsible yet thankless duty of being Monitor for the Dormitory. When Russell Inn burned, "Mary Cal" was relieved of the latter duty and was given more time to spend in writing.

MARION hails from that land of eternal sunshine—Lakeland, Fla., to be exact. This determined chap entered the University in the Fall of 1921 with the purpose of becoming a full-fledged Civil Engineer by June, 1925—and his purpose has been accomplished. He is one of the few men in the Engineering School who has in his possession a Phi Beta Kappa key, which speaks well for his scholastic ability.

As chief of party at the Engineering Summer Camp, Marion showed that he was not afraid of work and to him a great deal of the success of the first summer encampment is due.

We all admire him because he is the type of man who puts his whole heart and soul into everything he undertakes, and who can always be counted on to make a success of his endeavors.

We understand that Marion intends to take up Highway Construction as his life work, and we feel sure that North Carolina would be very fortunate in securing his services.

ELIZABETH, commonly known by the undignified name of "Hickey," came to the Class of '25 in her Junior year, fresh from the conquest of Fassifern and St. Mary's where she has carried away all the honors.

She has proved to be a delightful addition to the class, even though she has done much damage to the Student Body in general, for it has been computed that every day at least two Freshmen succumb to her charms.

Seriously speaking "Hickey" is really one of the most popular members of the class. She is always on the job, whether it is serving on a committee, singing in the choir or leading a figure. Her ever-ready smile and charming personality will be greatly missed.

IN the Fall of 1921, Wesley, better known on the campus as "Hick," matriculated at Trinity College. He frequently visited the University and was convinced that his place was in "Dean Howell's pill-rolling class," so the following year he became a member of the Class of '25.

"Hick" has a very sunny disposition and never worries about anything except which one of his many female friends is "the one," but he has found it's best to love them all and no one in particular. "Hick" is one of the pleasantest and most congenial members of our class and always meets you with a smile. In the words of a late, lamented Burns, we can well say "but to meet him is to love him." "Hick" is not only popular but also a model student, his studies come first. Chemistry 35 held no horrors for him. He ran off the experiment in qualitative and quantitative analysis so accurately that he won that enviable name — "Chemistry Shark." Many afternoons have we seen him on the campus green absorbed in "Old Remington," and we are assured that the State Board is only a stepping-stone to "Hick's" success.

HICKS, as he is called by his many friends, is universally known and liked on the campus. His endless capacity for jokes and boundless sense of humor, to which can be added a veritable storehouse of miscellaneous knowledge, have caused him to be an outstanding member of the Senior Class. Hicks may be termed a typical Collegiate type in that he has refused to take his studies too seriously, but on the other hand, has enjoyed them to the fullest extent. He is a bull on Latin and English, and we might say he approaches, through no special effort or desire of his own, that class known as the "literati."

Tall and majestic in bearing, with a deep and sonorous voice, he is ideally fitted for his elected profession, Law, and we predict that he will reach the heights in this profession after a few more years of study.

WALT is a good old scout even if he does intend to devote his life to Accounting. He combines the qualities of good humor, loyalty and absolute sincerity. Above all, when he tells you he will do a thing, you can depend on that thing being done, and done well.

Entering at the age of sixteen Walter has risen to the dignified position of Senior, without a struggle. Passing courses is a favorite pastime with him, and when it comes to Accounting, he devours that with a relish.

Keep bull sessions and the fairer sex off his mind, and his machinery runs without a hitch. As a genuine pal, he is hard to beat.

He receives his degree at the early age of twenty, a fact which speaks well for his ability. Nothing but success can follow a man of such ability and willingness to work. "Little Boy," as he is known to men who remember him as a Freshman when he entered in the long-distant past, will be missed on the campus.

THIS fellow hit these parts in the Fall of 1922 after one year of A.B. work, but was later led to believe that his life will be happiest spent as a Pharmacist. Fortunately—for us, anyway—he matriculated in the School of Pharmacy in the Fall of 1923, and has been with us ever since. Hodges possesses those characteristics that distinguish a gentleman. In addition he is slow to make his decisions, but when the conclusion is once reached, it is absolutely final. His chief ambition after leaving here is to become a noted man in the field of Pharmacy. We are sure he will, from the record he has set up here.

As Hodges is about to begin a long journey through the professional world, we wish him much success in all his undertakings and that the friends he will make later will be as numerous as the ones he leaves.

JESSE Willis Parrott, "Dean," "Slide-Rule," "???" Hodges. We can say very little about the original names of this young man, but the nicknames characterize his College career: "Dean," acquired in his first year by the continuous rearrangement of exam schedules; "Slide-Rule," from attempted use of such an instrument while in his embryonic stage as an Engineer; and "??," which includes those of odd times, and which pass with his passing from his Alma Mater.

Hodges has not wasted his time while in College. Although not always at the head of his class he has been consistent in his work and insists that the same things are taught at both ends. At any rate, "J. W. P." has had a merry time during his career, including Summer Schools, and that is something.

The profession of Electrical Engineering is receiving a new member who is destined to become a popular personage among his associates in whatever field he chooses.

JUDGE," named after Chief Justice Walter Clark, came to Carolina in 1921 from the "City of Smokes." For many months he was unable to decide whether he wanted to be a doctor or a weather prophet. In 1923, he entered the Medical School in spite of the fact that he would have made an exceptional weather prophet. Through much research work and original experiments he has demonstrated a philosophical phenomenon: "The early bird catches the dibothriocephalus." HONEYCUTT came to the University to get a liberal education. He wanted as wide a variety of courses and as much freedom in their pursuit as possible. He has secured both and more. He is theoretically and practically a champion of the cause of optional class attendance.

He is indifference personified. However, to dispel any doubt as to his sociability which this might imply, it may be said that he has an engaging personality that has made for him many warm friends. He is the luckiest man on The Hill, and if there is anything in the old proverb, "It is better to be born lucky than rich," he is bound to succeed.

As a devout believer in the philosophy of manana, he has selected tropical South America as the field of his future activities. We predict that he will be to it what James J. Hill was to our great Northwest.

IF Borden had any idea of making P B K when he landed in Chapel Hill he kept it to himself like the wise young man he is. Yea, and this has been the keynote of his College career—other people do the talking while Borden does the thinking and learning. We do not mean by this that he never commits himself; rather do we mean that he waits until everybody is through, and then he tells them in a few words what they have been trying to say. If a keen mind means anything, Borden has the world by the tail.

We could add a supplement to this volume if we told of the many ways in which Borden has used his head, but it must suffice to mention here the competent way in which he has handled the financial affairs of the German Club. We leave it with you. Could it have been done better?

"B" is in for everything that comes up, and we could not wish for a better pal. There is no need to say anything about the future of one who is so true a friend, so good a sport, and such a real Southern gentleman.

FOLKS, meet Mr. Julian Cletus Hord who hails from Shelby, N. C., where men are men and women are not. Cletus (we would like to use his nickname, but our sense of propriety forbids) first came to us in 1922 but having domestic affairs which were important, he left us for the brief period of a year, to return with the Class of '25. Thus we gain, and old '24, like the famous '07, loses.

During the time we have known Cletus he has endeared himself to us by his irrepresible good humor and his happy-go-lucky attitude. But all of this seems to help him in his student activities, or maybe he possesses that wonderful sixth sense of being able to spot his instructors. His grades will attest to the fact that he is attentive to his studies.

Probably the main reason why Cletus passes his work is the thought that back at home he has a wife and children. But be that as it may, we wish for him the highest success possible in his life after he leaves the University and passes the State Board.

HERE'S to "Hug," a living specimen of personified optimism. He is a firm believer in the philosophy expressed in the sentence: "Day by day in every way the world gets better and better." If he has ever been downhearted, no one knew anything about it. He entered the University, broke financially but not in spirit. Since his entrance he has made several adventures in the business world which were both novel and remunerative. His honor system apple-boxes have put the Greeks to shame. They have spread like wildfire until now every dormitory has its fruitstand and candy kitchen, and many a self-help student jingles coin in a pocket that would otherwise have been empty. PAUL Henry Huss, more widely known by the name of "Monk," hails from the hills of Western North Carolina. Cherryville, his hometown boasts of being the highest point between the mountains and the sea. We would say the same of "Monk's" friends here on the campus. He has as many or more than any boy here.

"Monk" has chosen teaching as his profession, and we are sure that he will succeed. Realizing that to succeed, one must know the assistants in one's field, "Monk" has spent several summers of research here at Carolina, making such acquaintances. But one fair damsel won his heart and now the girl back home is out of luck.

"Monk's" apparent philosophy of life is a good one. He works when he works and plays when he plays. There is always a "Saturday Evening Post" rolled and ready for use after the game, and "Monk" is one of the users, the most of the time.

If in the future years we could be so lucky as to chance upon Prof. Huss as he expounds to his eager students the knowledge which he has gained in his four full years of work here, we would find that he had not lost his power to make and hold friends as in days of yore.

On entering Medicine he found many things to interest him, and he is always ready to discuss them. We have dubbed him "Grandpa," but that name is slightly misplaced when we think of this dashing young medical student. He is a Tar Heel, but his home is in Virginia, and we have reason to believe that a great deal of him is in Georgia.

Everyone goes to "Grandpa," for consolation and advice. He seems to have had lots of experience, and not only does he profit by it but he is willing to impart the benefit of it to his fellow men. Gentleness is his chief trait, and by some he has been called the most polite man in town. INSPIRATION and hard work have made his success. The greatest men in history have been inspired by women and Rudolph is no exception to the rule. When he came to Carolina he left his heart with a fair lady back in New Bern. That she has been an excellent inspiration is evident from the success he has made.

It is a significant fact that no one before him has made such a stellar success in football and at the same time finished the Electrical Engineering course in four years. It becomes still more striking when we consider his grades which rate him as above the average student. In his Junior year he was initiated into the Honorary Electrical Fraternity of Phi Zeta Nu.

Here we have a rare combination: an inspired athlete and student who has won success over the long trail of hard work. It is safe to believe that the same driving spirit will carry him to the top in his chosen profession.

WHEN Governor Brewster of Maine came to Chapel Hill last fall to whitewash the G.O.P., it naturally fell to the lot of Charlie Jonas to introduce the speaker, for "Red" is the recognized leader of the small but faithful band of Republicans in our midst. Jonas is gifted with a remarkably pleasing and convincing delivery and a genius for thinking on his feet which has made him one of the pillars of the Di Society and has also won for him his "N. Jonas has a host of friends; in fact, all are friends, and no one deserves them more than he. BEHOLD! Here IT is, so, Fair Reader, look no more. You behold in "Red" the incarnation of Saint and Devil, Sage and Jester, Student, Thinker, and an all-round good fellow.

His name, which he wears upon his head, connotes sheik, but his sheikish tendencies were almost smothered by the famous Daggett-Lear-Hoefler combination. However, such a formidable trio could not keep "Red" from many "Pieks," Grail Dances and a thorough appreciation of any profitable amusement which offered itself.

Whether in the class room, or the Gym, or in his own sanctum, slinging the male yearling so skillfully, "Red" is always the self-possessed gentleman. "Red" says he will be an Engineer, and he has an enviable record to back his claims.

Many girls, Summer School, and others, will mourn his passing into the "cold, cruel world," where his tenderest and softest instincts will be hardened and tempered in the fire of experience.

THERE is just one "Touchdown" in this world. He made that touchdown over the wrong goal; nevertheless, he is no mean football player, as the teams which have played the "Ironmen" will testify.

Baseball, however, is his long suit, unless it is bull sessions. The baseball team would not be complete without him. Why? Because by his playing he helps to win, and by constantly keeping Coach Bill in chewing tobacco he aids the brain of the power behind the throne. "Touchdown's" first name begins with "P". But what that P stands for only his mother knows, and he won't let her tell. However, he hotly denies that it is Percival.

"Touchdown" is one of the boys who is always in a good humor, he mixes with his many friends and has a good time in spite of his "Boysish Bob" which has unfortunately curbed his ardor and activities.

He may go to the "big leagues," but even if he does he will always be the same old "Touchdown."

THERE came a man to us, two years ago, known as "Peter" Jones. But however prevalent may be his name, this man "Jones" is, beyond a doubt, a "Jones" unto himself, there having been none before like him; nor can posterity ever reproduce him. Though a man whose good fortune permits him to be an esteemed husband and a happy "dad" he came to us with "single" ideas. He has fed the crying mouths of thousands of hungry football fans with his samples of Peter's Chocolate—hence his nickname. To say he is a good business man is an injustice to his bulldog tenacity. For to our knowledge he has earned money here in every conceivable way. Jones has sold everything in Chapel Hill, from medicated toothpicks to women's real silk hosiery. In addition to paying his way through the University and supporting his wife and babies, he did excellent scholastic work, just missing Phi Beta Kappa by the one quintillionth part of a hair. No man ever learned quite so much about the personnel and workings of the University in so short a time as did Jones.

Our friend is now with the Upjohn Company of New York City, and we sincerely hope that, as a student in the University of Life, among his other achievements may also be these—Health, Wealth, and Fame.

BUS" exceeds by far the average 'man in names, weight, knowledge, and experience. It would be decidedly pleonastic to attempt an analysis of any one of these. Lest his little amour of last Summer School be forgotten, we had better quote him and Kipling in the line, "I learned about women from her. His fancy alternates between this Lordeie and the present-day drama. He will, we are afraid, never forgive our own Dr. Archibald Henderson for overlooking the famous Sir J. M. Barrie in his treatise, The Changing Drama. When "Bus" condensed his signature to John William E. Joyner, we dared hope that he would even give up ice cream and become one of us again. His anticipated trip to Europe during Easter will complicate matters further, for even Mr. Volstead himself couldn't keep him from the Deutche Bier with which he is already familiar.

If Judge Landis doesn't hear his voice and make him a big league umpire, we are sure to hear of "Bus" accomplishing some worthwhile thing right here in North Carolina a little later. We wish you "bon voyage" in the world, "Bus."

CAROLINA can justly boast of another self-made man. "E. L." registered here in the Fall of 1920, but the call of the school-room was too much for him, so he was confiscated and hurriedly ushered into the ranks of a "schoolmaster."

Being one of those thoroughbred, hardy, Godfearing, liberty-loving, law-abiding, honest mountain citizens, he re-entered again in 1922. Justus is one of those fellows who begin at the very bottom of things and work hard. Many of us remember his formula beginning—up in the venerable old Di Senate. But as time passed on, he kept sharpening his debating wits, and now Freshmen sit in perfect astonishment as he pours down their open mouths and into their ears, smooth-flowing bull on the Ku Klux Klan and other such radical subjects. But going further than representing his society and class in the art of public argumentation, he has become one of Carolina's most distinguished debaters, having won in every Intercollegiate Contest in which he has participated.

"SQUIRRELY" was smiled upon kindly by Dame Fortune and received a full portion of that gift known as gameness and perseverance. He started with the Class of '23, but that shouldn't be held against him, since he has rectified his mistake.

In his immediate circle of friends, "Squirrely" is conceded to be an authority upon that subject nearest the heart and most often in the mind of every true Carolina man—women. Drawing from a vast store of experience in such matters, dating back to the S. A. T. C. days, he should certainly be able to recognize different grades of fruit at a glance. Being of a kindly disposition, he very generously keeps the "spotted" for himself and gives the sound to his friends.

"Squirrely" can't decide whether to develop his pedagogical complex or to take charge of Mr. General Electric's little business, but choose as he may, he will make a place for himself in his profession. His friendship will be a fresh-blown rose when College days are a dim remembrance.

BENJAMIN, better known on The Hill as "Ben," hails from Cleveland County. He came to us from the famous City of Shelby, noted for its production of great men. Ben will, no doubt, carry on the traditions of his old home town by becoming great.

His hobby, while here, was Zoology. Pope once said, "The proper study of mankind is man." "Ben" says, "The proper study of Frogology is the Frog." He seems to have a natural love for science; however, there was one branch of it which he detested, namely, math.

We feel sure that "Ben" will bring not only fame to himself and to his home town but also to his Alma Mater. He has always held her dear to his heart; in fact, he has so much attachment for her that he has declared his intention of returning to study Medicine. We know of nothing that he holds more dear than Carolina unless it is the girl back home.

During his four short years here he has attained honors which come only to real workers, and to them after a struggle. His Phi Beta Kappa grades are testimonials to his soundness of mind and his ability to stick with a thing to the end. He learned early that the top is not crowded, and he has built his foundation secure for climbing there.

Contrary to the rule, he has not let his brilliant scholastic pursuits interfere with his education. He is an active man in College affairs. His brilliant and humorous speeches in the Di Senate have inspired many Freshmen to follow his example.

It is whispered and rumored that he has an idol, or ideal, somewhere which inspires his efforts and drives him on to greater achievements. He, in truth, "Lifts up his eyes unto the hills."

"Bantam" is little but he is loud, and it's "Bantam" who always does the crowing when the battle is fought and won. He maintains that he is no relation to "Kaiser Bill" of world-war fame, despite the fact that one of his best friends persisted for a time in calling him "Bill". The logical conclusion is that he is just a pedigreed "Bantam".

"Bantam" has a wonderful sense of humor. Some folks claim that a man can be judged by what he eats, but we are inclined to agree with "Tommy" Carlyle who said that a man's laugh is his measure; consequently, we vote "Bantam" 100% a man.

"Bantam's" motto is "do or die." He is a "sticker" and never gives up. He hasn't decided yet what his supreme battle will be, but whatsoever it is, we predict for him a complete victory. Take it from us—"Bantam" will do the job to perfection. 'Em's our sentiments.

HERE is a Yankee, who, unlike some other members of his tribe, has lived amongst us for four years without attempting to revolutionize our social system. One night in September, 1921, six million people told him good-by; the next night he was greeted by four hundred bloodthirsty Sophs and four inches of Chapel Hill mud. Quite a contrast; enough to shake anyone; but not a murmur from "Yank." He donned his hobnails with the rest of us and took things as they came.

"Yank" is a born Engineer and a good student. His keenly-analytical mind has never been found wanting when called upon to solve the highly-involved problems thrust upon Engineering students. He is by no means a crank on these technical subjects, but he has some very decided opinions on some of the problems that confront Engineers as men and not as calculating machines.

The outstanding characteristic of this man is speed, as evidenced by his ability on the Varsity Track squad and his amount of spare time while carrying a course in Engineering.

Whatever his work in the world, these three characteristics—agreeableness, keenness, and speed, assure him success.

JOE came directly from Sanford to us, but his habitat for the first thirteen years of his life was in the wilds of South Africa. Hence his curly hair.

As a student, Joe is unexcelled, although he is by no means of the bookworm variety. His main indoor sport is catching the first "Pick" every night. But in spite of all outside attractions, Joe upholds his scholastic standing.

In the laboratory, Joe once made an important discovery, namely, that potassium chlorate and sulphur will explode with concussion.

In the vision of his fellow students he is described as honest, congenial, of a forgiving nature, and always minding his own affairs. In all things, Joe is a gentleman, and that is as much as can be said of any man.

We think that he may probably branch to some other line. Being versatile, he could classify himself as musician, journalist, or typist. To a number, however, his smile seems a sufficient social D. & B., for every year he must go—well, to Greensboro, maybe, and be a star of poses for somebody's girl. Truth of the matter is that it is the same handwriting every year, and instead of the simplicity of a Freshman smile we now observe all the marks which are the lot of a conquered Romeo a la Eros. Thus it is fitting and proper that we make a twofold send-off to the land where dreams come true.

He entered the Electrical Engineering Department where he became famous for his excellent Engineering Reports and for his work in "transient currents." Last year, much to his surprise, he found that his average was ninety-two. Although he has not definitely announced it, we believe that he has entered the race for Phi Beta Kappa this year, for during the last two quarters he has stacked up a score of eight straight A's, and according to all indications, and the best dope from the profs, he will score four more this quarter.

Our athletes showed their confidence in Jack's managerial ability by electing him to manage the 1025 Basketball team. The success of the season shows that he did the work well.

His first year on The Hill found him a member of Carolina's crack Glee Club by virtue of his extraordinary ability to tickle a guitar and to sing in a good tenor voice. It is rumored that those self-same two qualities served to keep "Bill" steadily employed and much sought after in the service of the ladies in the Summer School of 1924. He weathered the hot season, however, and seemed to be none the worse for wear. In fact, he was so encouraged by his experience that he has learned to play nearly all the horns in Mr. Side's band, but we think that a cornet has him slightly anchored at present.

"Bill's" friends are numerous, and outspoken in their admiration of him. Always at work and a good student, he's never too busy to stop and talk a few minutes and play La Paloma. SIG," good natured, quiet, conservative, came from Enfield. Although quiet he is full of life and always in for a good time. He is one of the all-round fellows and during his stay on the campus has made many friends. He is a real worker and has done well in campus activities. As a student he has been a consistent worker and a real believer in application to duty.

BECAUSE of his size, some of the fellows began to call this young person "Embryo," but since the name lacked the necessary idea of sophistication, it was changed to "Tiny." What he lacks in stature (he is only four feet in his high heels), he makes up for in worldly wisdom.

He came here with the unyielding determination to gain admittance to the Medical School, and he did not allow little things like zoology and physics to hold him for long. Yet his attendance at the Grail Dances and Summer Schools were taken as a matter of course.

Quiet, dignified, unassuming, and always on time, he has won for himself the highest regard of the Faculty, and medical students as a whole. Genial, witty, cheerful, and generous to a fault, he may be small in size but we know that he will be big in his profession, and wish him the very best of luck.

ON a beautiful afternoon long ago I followed a rainbow trail to its end and there I found Clarence Miller—hotch pot of pure gold. With countless Orange County fairies mangling the beams of a dying sun in his disheveled mop of hair and a funny little clay pipe from Dublin long forgotten in one corner of his mouth, he was, ipso facto, a young Paris—quite undecided whether to award the palm of greatest beauty to a peculiar formation of triassic rock or to the tinkling of a sinuous streamlet close by or to the melodious twittering of a songbird deep in the wood. In despair, he laid the gift-offering on the altar of Mother Nature herself, and together we fled back to mundane things. He has never yet decided between them, and while the songs of seven nations sing in his heart he never will.

Poet, philosopher, scientist, athlete, connoisseur extraordinary, and companion par excellence. There is a touch of divinity in the doctrine of life in which he not only believes but unconsciously practices, to wit: In the laboratory, to be a scientist to the gills; outside, to be a human being. Diogenes, put away your lantern, the search is ended.

TO write up Gurney Talmadge Mitchell in a deserving and comprehensive manner would require more latitude than that allowed by this space. We suggest the character of the man when we say that he is one who has very definite aims in life and who directs all energy toward realizing those aims.

Mitch" hales from up-State, about Jennings. He came to Carolina after completing the four-year course at Mars Hill in two and one half years. His work during two years in Pre-Medical School and two years in the Medical School has been of consistent excellence. He has found time for occasional social engagements in spite of his mania for studying. We find him a man of well-balanced mental capacities, of companionable temperament, and of sincerity in his associations with others. His mental attitude bespeaks success, and his classmates and friends share his confidence as to his future in his chosen profession.

JUST what George expects to take up to his life work we have been unable to ascertain, but whatever it is, we feel sure that success will crown his efforts. He is one of those unassuming men who would rather show you his virtues than tell you of them. He has not sought honors upon the campus, but has been content with being one of its good citizens, and these after all give stability and genuine character to our campus life.

The same jovial personality and the same strength of character which have won for him the respect and esteem of his fellows here at Carolina will, we predict, cause the world outside to recognize him as a real man.

UPON first sight, this gentleman impresses one as an illustrious mountaineer; but as a matter of fact, he is merely a man of the foothills—geographically speaking, of course. In reality he is an intellectual giant; a mountaineer with aesthetic tastes, having fully read such things as "Marlowe's Complete Works," and our most modern literary attainments—"True Story" and the like.

Throughout his College career, Moose has shown exceptional ability on class, and his good work is due to some miraculous phenomenon, for he was never caught pondering over any problem involving preparation of a lesson.

He is known to his friends as "Bull"; and he has such traits as those which entitle him to a happy farewell and a good-luck toast from us all.

WE are grateful to Flora MacDonald for sending the Class of 1925 one of her Faculty, for if ideals can be transferred we are the gainers.

She is a rare composite of a high degree of inherent ability, excellent training, sincere and lovable character, and gentleness and refinement of manner.

The fact that she was never known to cut but one class and never has known the sensation of receiving anything less than an "A," is proof positive that she early learned the laws of habit formation.

WE all know him as just "Morrison." Although he has not been an outstanding figure in campus activities, he has not failed to develop the physical as well as the mental side of his life, being a persistent candidate for the wrestling team. We all know Morrison as a quiet, hard-working fellow for whom the "Pick" has little attraction. The only thing that can lure him away from his studies is a date with a pretty girl, and he never fails to win the favor of the fair sex, for he has a good line and plenty of experience.

Although Morrison is the relative of an ex-governor, he does not cast longing eyes toward that position, for, as he puts it, he wants "a job which allows him to start at the bottom with an executive position in view." The company that gets him is lucky, for he is well prepared for his career. So here's hoping you future success in your future life, old chap.

"TOMMY" started his battle against Ignorance as a student in the Piedmont High School, located in the foothills of the Old North State. In the midst of all, he was called by Uncle Sam to help hold the Hun.

He has had the good fortune of learning many valuable lessons in the "University of Hard Knocks" before coming to Carolina. Chemistry and Zoology had the strongest attraction for him as an academic student. And like all men preparing to enter Medicine, he was unable to enjoy his dinner of French, German and Science for fear of missing the dessert—Medicine.

He has made a good medical student—a consistent, persevering and continual worker who always gets there. His outlook on life is of the right kind. When things look discouraging, he is not of the type to sing the old song "the uselessness of it all," but on the contrary, he grits his teeth, says "damn," and goes on his way. "Tommy" will make a good doctor, for he is sympathetic and possesses a goodly portion of real good, common sense.

HERE is a man who is as much entitled to the distinction of being called unique as anyone that we know. No one else can answer to quite as many nicknames. He has no peer as a reckless yet skilled driver. Theodore Roberts is not in his class as a cigar-wielder. His laugh—William James himself could not explain, and we are certain that no member of the legislature could be more individualistic in tying his necktie. These are only a few of the things that make this gentleman one of the rarest and most unusual members of the Class of '25.

Most of his work as a student has been in the field of the "ologies." Being fully convinced that "we are what we are, largely because of where we are," and that "we are all riding on the omnibuses along with our ancestors," he has passed all of Collier Cobb's courses without a hitch.

Withal, Moye is a genuine good fellow; attending strictly to his own business, faithful to his friends, a regular good sport, and possessing a real sense of humor.

HE came to us from Trinity, and certainly the change has been a good one for us. We have learned to know him as "Mack." He is a gentleman and a scholar of no mean worth.

He is a diligent worker, not easily discouraged, and looks always on the bright side of life. He loves Medicine, and seeks earnestly to find the truth. "SPEEDY" is, without doubt, the smartest man in the Med. Class—when it comes to the ladies. It is rumored that he can see a woman farther away than any man on the campus. Besides being a devil with the ladies, he wades through the medical curriculum as though he were still in the pre-med ranks, and Dr. Ikey's courses don't seem to worry him at all.

One may wonder at his nickname. If they could have become acquainted with his activities during two Summer Schools at Carolina, as well as his present interest at a feminine habitat in Greensboro, there would be no further worry. MAC" has been so busy since he came to Carolina that he has not had any time to spend in collecting honors. Although he has been with us only four years, he has finished one year of Medicine in addition to his A. B., and that is not the half of it. He is one of those lucky fellows who is gifted with a marvelous capacity for making money and, like the true Scotchman that he is, for saving it. Not only has he worked his own way through but he has furnished work for many of his fellow students who would have had it hard without "Mac's" assistance. One would not expect a man as busy as he to spend much time studying; nevertheless, he is one of the best students in our class. He does his work thoroughly, quickly, and with a degree of facility which is amazing. Everyone thinks that high finance missed a good man when the medical profession called him, but all are agreed that he is bound to succeed equally as well there if he carries out into life with him the same capacity for work and the same optimistic, cheerful spirit he has shown here.

SANDY" is a member of that swift quintet which succeeded admirably in upholding the record which Carolina has established, and helping the basketball team of 1925 in winning once more the Southern Championship.

But besides his pre-eminence in the major sport, he has a hobby—not the usual cross-word-puzzle craze, but a noble game—the game of horseshoes; the modern equivalent of the noble pastime of quoits, played by the men of antiquity. At this he is a shark, and if the plan of Intercollegiate horseshoe pitching contests is carried out, we believe that he and Sprat Cobb will win the championship over all competitors.

He has already shown his judgment by leaving Davidson after two years, and gracing Carolina with his presence, where he has shone socially. He will undoubtedly meet with success in knocking up against the cold, cold world if he can find a place where his athletic fame has followed him.

WHEN a man has a physiognomy suitable to both the gridiron and the dance hall, he is a rare bird; but if he actually functions properly in both places, he is one of those phenomena which usually ain't. But "Mac" is, and there is a considerable portion of him.

We have heard that he is quiet and perfectly self-contained when bucking the line on the football field; we've seen him do that same thing in the Gym at Grail Dances, and can vouch for his great strength and skill. He is one of the products of the Chapel Hill High School, which may account for some of his excellent characteristics.

THIS young man is particularly hard to write up, because being unusual, he requires a write-up that differs from the usual order of things. Nevertheless, here goes:

"Mac," as he is called by all who know him, is an unusually fast worker in all he undertakes. In laboratory he is always the first to finish and, contrary to the proverbial theory, he does his work well. So well in fact, that he was chosen by Professor Kyser to do research work in Saponification and Emulsification.

"Mac" is studying Pharmacy so that he may return to Charlotte from whence he came and make his hometown proud of its son by opening an elaborate pharmacy. We are sure that he will succeed in this, especially if "V. V." inspires him. This is the only reference we are allowed to make concerning his "affaires d'amour."

Suffice it to say that he has been successful here and that our best wishes for his continued success accompany him at the parting of our ways. In the hearts of the Class of 1925 there will always be one spot reserved for "Mac."

BRUCE certainly missed two thirds of the best part of his College life when he failed to register with us as a Freshman and catch a year in Smith or Carr. But, anyway, he's able to qualify as a "reg'lar fellow" after existing through a year at Citadel.

In the Fall of '22, he heard the call of his latent commercial talents, and came to get them developed by King Dudley's cohorts. His record in the Commerce School shows that he has hit his line, and doubtless in a short while the business world will recognize his ability.

"R. B.," in addition, is a whang of a fiddler and saxophone player. "Just ask the man who's heard him." The North State Eight, which he has so successfully engineered this year, has given us some real music, and no maybe about it. We'd have missed a lot without him and his melody-makers.

Besides that, our tall boy is no slouch with the wimmen. When he lamps a lady with the big brown beacons, she just couldn't be a man-hater if she tried.

HE was known as Edward in Hendersonville, but "Pat," it seemed to the dwellers of Mary Anne Smith, was far more appropriate. So the cognomen of "Pat" was given to him, and "Pat" it has remained ever since.

His aspirations during his Freshman year were noble, among them being the hope for a Phi Beta Kappa key. And to prove to all comers that he was sincere in his intentions, on the wall of his room was a clipping, proclaiming to the world in general and to his associates in particular that Edward Patterson of Hendersonville had made the Honor Roll during his first term at the University.

Fortunately, however, the next term saw "Pat" with new ideas. He decided that the "gentleman's grade," C, was all he wanted, and this decision probably kept him from becoming a "bookworm" and made him the happy-go-lucky fellow he is today. And, in spite of week-end trips, parties and dances, he has no trouble at all in keeping up this average.

A good fellow and a man anyone would be proud to call a friend, describes "Pat" exactly in a few words.

FREDRICK, whether he is running rings around everybody on the track or presiding over the argument in the Philanthropic Assembly, or "bulling" with Horace Williams on Philosophy, is always there with the goods. Professors as well as students have well learned not to stir him up, because in holding down one side of an argument, there are none better built.

The campus has been upset lately with the rumor that some fair one at N.C.C.W. has captured the heart of this young gallant. If that be so, we can only say, "God bless you!" We say it, although bemoaning the fact that the Saw has lost a would-be master, because Fred is master of all he surveys.

With his rollicking good humor, Fred has made a host of friends at the "Dear Old University," and they are friends in more than name; friends who will have their eyes on him when he is Chief Justice of the United States.

Blair is an excellent student, having passed through the fiery gates of the Commerce School and returned without a falter.

When you hear a rumble about three notes lower than a bass drum, you know that's Blair. His laugh is as contagious as measles; you couldn't mistake him in the dark. That voice has been one of the mainstays in the Glee Club.

Although ready to join the fun any time, Blair is of the more serious type. Calm mastery is the keynote of his personality. Never has the writer seen him ruffled or excited over anything. When his projects have met adversity, philosophy, and not "cuss words," has been his rejoinder. He was chosen four times for the mythical all-State team, three times for the all-South Atlantic, and once for the all-Southern. THE pages of history are replete with the great deeds of little men, such as Napoleon, etc., and strange enough it seems that always they manage to accomplish more than anyone else. Every locality has its big little men, and so has Chapel Hill. Of this cleft group, none is more prominent than Jimmie Poole.

Ever since J. Wyche stepped on this campus, he has been a brilliant figure of accomplishments, and particularly has he disproved the belief that only men of large stature are fitted for athletic teams. Last year, he was first substitute on the Southern Championship Basketball Team, and did very creditable work; this season, when Captain Jack Cobb was sent to the hospital, Poole took his place at forward and starred, being the high-point scorer in his role as a regular.

Characteristic of all big little men, Poole did not shirk his scholastic duties in the face of campus honors, and graduation finds him a good student. His genial manner and overabundance of energy have combined to make him popularly prominent, and there are many who will regret his absence next year.

EVERY once in a while we find a man who dares to do his own thinking, to stand on his own intellectual pedestal. "four-square to all the winds that blow." Such a man is "Postum." For, after all, "there's a reason"

"Why should I be shackled by the cottony bands that hold most men in eternal subjection, when a mere breath of intellectual effort will scatter them to the skies?" asks he. We admire such a man. The world does. Without the faintest trace of brass-band display, but with a quiet dignity that has won for him an abiding place in the hearts of his carefully-chosen friends, "Postum" in his life here has proven that a man gets out of College more than a book education.

"Postum" reads much, studies just enough, thinks a great deal, nurses an abiding ambition to become a writer in the future, takes life philosophically, and with not too much cynicism. And when you see an essay, story, or poem with his name on it, read it. We shall.

WICK," otherwise known as "The Duke," for reasons quite apparent, plainly demonstrated his exceptional intelligence in choosing Carolina as the best place to get his higher education. A keen brain and kindly intentions, together with a characteristic habit of thinking for himself, combine to make his a forceful though entirely pleasing personality.

HERE we have the iconoclast! A scientist and an ungregarious animal, he cannot but impress all who come in contact with him as one not of the herd.

He is of keen mind and quick wit, he is handsome and he is able. With these assets, backed by ambition and a desire to know, "Spooks" will go far if he can ever choose a direction.

Another valuable trait which should push him—or at least dispense with a hindrance along life's way—is his unfondness of women. That, perhaps, being due to the fact that he has never had to court attention from that element in our population. They have always taken the initiative, and that to no avail.

"Rag" may turn out to be a surgeon and then again he may choose biology or psychology for his forte. At any rate, he will never be a Babbit. Fare-thee-well, "Spooks," and may the Powers-That-Be be with you.

THIS young man is a perfect example of the "College student." By that we mean one who can pull down "ones" and "twos" with perfect ease and yet find time to enjoy himself in the way of an "old-timer." He is always working, it seems, yet we often hear of him pursuing the epicurean activities which the entire State affords. By profession, he is an engineer, but by way of diversion he finds time for co-education. His activities are by no means limited to that. Always immaculate, he conducts himself with the befitting dignity of a gentleman—one of the "old school." His record here has been enviable and, without doubt, his learning ability, tact, and many other attributes of his charming personality will carry him far in his profession and into the hearts of his fellow men.

DAN" may be likened to an oasis in the heart of the Sahara Desert of the Class Room in which those who are so fortunate as to know him gather. Underneath the palms of his personality bubbles a spring of sparkling wit seldom found elsewhere, and all who have ever tested it are forever bound by its enchanting spell. This, in part, accounts for "Dan's" widespread popularity.

Men and women alike have been enchanted by "Dan's" personality. His "affaires de coeur" might be told in a book fittingly entitled, "Thousand and One Nights Each With a Different Girl". His conquests have been from coast to mountains, from bad roads to rice fields. But at present, he is making a gratifying attempt to conquer a sweet little heart in the "Furniture City."

As to his life's work, "Dan" is undecided. His aspirations seem to be as varied as his love affairs, ranging from an M.D. to Second Lieutenantcy, via West Point. Come what may, "Dan" can but make a success of it without the conventional "bon voyage" from us.

THIS is a man who by his every act has shown himself to be a gentleman. Carolina and the Class of '25 are proud to claim him.

Since his Sophomore year, John has passed four courses a quarter with the greatest ease. It is rumored that at one time he was seriously considering becoming an English professor, but now he intends to become the junior member of his father's law firm. His ability to distinguish right from wrong, insures for him a brilliant future and he will be a valuable addition to the North Carolina Bar.

His neatness of appearance, calm, easy and dignified manner, and his sincerity have made his appearance at all social functions a necessity. It is said that he is one of the most popular young men with the Co-eds, and appearances seem to indicate that that statement is true.

In conclusion, John, we extend to you our most sincere good wishes and hope that we will see much of you in the future, for our association with you has meant much to us and we hate to leave you.

JOHN does not have a nickname. When he came down here as a Freshman we tried to think of some appropriate campus appellation. Someone suggested "Red." We submitted the proposed title to John's consideration. He positively refused any such name, because according to him his hair was auburn, far from being red.

After all, we could not improve on his name. John is a mighty common name, but it fits him to a T. He is just good old John and if there is anything you want him to do for you, he is always "Johnnie on the spot."

Ever since Methuselah was graduated from College, there has been a tradition that four years are required to get the coveted sheepskin. John has disregarded all age-old customs and is showing us how to graduate in three years. He says that the secret in doing that stunt is knowing when to work and when to play. That may be true, but judging from the constant flow of dainty, perfumed letters bearing the Bessemer City postmark, we believe that he is getting divine inspiration from a feminine source.

John is going into Medicine. For us, the thought of those anatomy quizzes would give us a nightmare. John does not even give them a passing thought. He made a two-base hit off of "Froggy" Wilson and a circuit clout off Johnny Booker the Terrible. To him the medical profession will be a cinch. Go to it, John, we are betting on you!

TAKE equal amounts of character, dignity, sincerity of purpose, and add to them a level head and a courage that challenges your admiration, shake well before using, and you will have in this product a person who is known to us as "Robbie," a thoroughbred with a spirit and a snap which makes him interesting and likable and brings to us a realization of the hidden meaning in the statement, "Ain't friends great!"

This two-legged animal is far from being a "mollycoddle," instead he follows the policy of playing enough to keep physical as well as mental machinery in good condition. In fact, when he enters the squared circle, his opponent's charm of the skin you love to touch is about as valuable an asset as a peg leg in a forest fire.

He tells us that he is going to California, but we fear that he is soon to enter the 49th State of the Union—the state of matrimony—which has not yet been admitted to permanent membership. To the young lady, the Class of '25 surrenders a hell-uv-a good fellow

"RODIE" is somewhat of a globe-trotter. After spending two years in Defiance College, he shipped East to that place on the Southern Railway where Carolina students are prone to stick their heads out and yell "Whoopee, girls, Elon!" Here he lost very little time, but lots of hair. According to his version, it took big men to cause the ruin of his curly locks.

A good man can't be kept down, so "Rodie" joined the ranks of Harry Chase's Bad Boys and became a Carolina man. But not before he had taken unto himself a "better-half." Besides being one of the very few married men on the campus, he has the distinction of being the only foreigner from Central America and other Latin countries. TO serve as president of one's class for two years in succession is an honor considered quite unusual, yet "Lud" Rogers has done that thing. Not only has he guided the Class of '25 through two years but he has also found time to engage in many other campus activities. He has won his monogram in debate and has been addressed as Speaker of the Phi. But these honors do not give one a full insight into the real nature of Ludlow, for he is always jovial, friendly and ready for fun. Girls are things that he cannot resist; and neither can they resist him. If it were not for the fact that he falls for all of them, we would have fears for his immediate single-blessedness; but we foster no such fears.

If we may judge by his qualities of fair play, determination, congeniality and universality of interests, then we would not be afraid to risk a prophecy concerning his success in the great outside. We understand that he is planning to enter the great profession of Barristers. His addition to that ancient and honorable clan will be as welcome and beneficial as his membership in many campus organizations has been.

THIS handsome lad has started a search for the fountain of youth. Whether he finds in it the colloidal dispersion system, a strong antitoxin, or the active principle of digitalis, remains to be seen.

He is the youngest member of the class and one of the best. His Scotch blood unfortunately cannot be cooled at the knees in an American University, but knickers for this Scotchman are good substitutes. Dancing and music lure him from anatomical relations, bacterial characteristics, and alkaloidal doses. He has no sympathy for the lack of rhythm and time displayed by the dance of the bacillus typhosis.

A BARE four years ago, a very unsophisticated young man boarded the train in Salisbury with a ticket to Chapel Hill and a head full of hopes and ambitions, leaving behind him a multitude of lonesome and broken hearts. It was reported that the tears of the fair maids of that village ceased only after the passage of many weeks. But ambition must not bow to love, so this fair campus received unto its bosom one who is destined to, some day, be seen in the Hall of Fame.

Though the maids of Salisbury were forgotten in the cruel task of achieving success in Medicine, not so were those of other cities, for soon "Tommy" began the worship at the Shrine of Venus in none other than the City of Industry. And the results of his activities there won for him the title of "sheik." Like the sailor with his sweetheart in every port, Sheiky has a girl in every town from here to Winston-Salem, especially Greensboro.

DURING his four years at Carolina, "Runt" has quietly achieved a success that is real and permanent. Industry, ability, dependability, and strength of character are qualities which show that "Runt" is big in mind though young in years. While carrying a heavy course, he has found time to do a great deal of practical work for the University and the town. Most of the recent improvements in the way of walks, drives, streets and drainage systems in our community have been wrought by his hand. Neatness in drafting, accuracy in figuring, and ability in the field, all combine to insure success for "Rosie" as an Engineer.

Hertel's chief stumbling block has been in the form of French, and he admits that he hasn't any more use for it than a snake in the Sahara has for snowshoes. If he ever catches "Vandy" outside the portals of this mighty University, we predict that he'll have about as much chance of surviving as a hummingbird'd have in a battle royal between eleven bulldogs.

In the social whirlpool, we have to admit that "Jake" knows his stuff, and he has acquired the insatiable habit of loving 'em all, but we predict that his lease on paradise will soon be changed to a first mortgage, and Cupid will throw him for a loss.

HE who has friends must be one," is evidently Johnnie's maxim in life, for by being a friend to everyone he comes in contact with, he has made more than his share of friends during the five days of the week he has chosen to stay on The Hill, the other two usually being spent in making at least his share of the feminine hearts palpitate more vigorously. He stays on a diet of laughs and smiles, and this constant good nature working in perfect harmony with most attractive manners make him a favorite with the Student Body. Polite, cordial and sincere—Lord Chesterfield's life was one long breach of etiquette when compared with that of this young Beau Brummel.

The only skeleton in Johnnie's closet is what he paid for that pedigreed bull pup on which he lavishes milk, kisses, and paternal love.

THE man who weighs his words before he speaks always has something worth while to say. Leon is one of the more serious-minded type, but he never carries his seriousness to such an extent as to exclude all levity. In short, he is a man to whom a friend can turn for advice in time of need, or upon whom he can depend as a pal when a good time is brewing.

There is only one thing which Leon has undertaken that he has never been able to accomplish. At the end of his Sophomore year, he took a little vacation of a year, but returned with the serious intention of throwing the entire wrestling team. All he has to show for his exertions are two broken ribs, a splintered shoulder, and several other such minor injuries. We hope that if he returns for postgraduate work next year, he will meet with better success.

He has been regarded as a woman-hater, but a trip to Richmond last Easter made him see the light. "Eventually, why not now?" was the only answer he could give to his sudden change of attitude.

The vim and determination which Leon shows in working towards the completion of anything he undertakes, are evidence enough of his future success.

SAM is a boy who has really obtained something tangible from the four years that he has spent in College. His stay at the University has not been a mere vacation sojourn. His scholastic attainments have been among the highest, for he just missed the right of being awarded the Phi Beta Kappa key, and his average grade for the whole three years, or nine quarters, was that of "B," and besides that, "Sam" has never missed attending a single class since he has been a student here for sickness or otherwise! Some record, eh? And for his excellency he is now on the voluntary class attendance list which was recently drawn up.

Now from all this you have already pictured him as a studious-looking, precocious grind who wears his rimmed "specs." But that's all wrong, because "Sam" is nothing of the sort. He's simply an all-around good fellow who happens to be blessed with that faculty which enables him to do everything well without working himself to death as most of his poor fellow students have to do.

JIM" or "Shep," he answers to either name, has had four successful years in College. He graduates this spring with the distinction of never having consciously taken a "pud" course, and of having had more courses under those professors who always make it hard for students to graduate, than any other member of the Senior Class.

For three years, he has been one of the steadiest, most regular and toughest of the "iron men" on the football field. By contrast, his social activities and his popularity on the ballroom floor have won him a host of friends and acquaintances. In gala times as well as on serious occasions he has always held his own. One of "Shep's" hobbies is co-education. The afternoon strollers, the nightly Pickwickers and the socially-inclined all bear witness to this activity.

As he has been successful in studies, as an iron man and socially, so we predict that he will be successful in his study of Law, which he is to take up next year. His friends all grieve over losing him, but we realize that he goes on to conquests in other fields.

CADA uno," as the interesting subject of this sketch told his Spanish prof on a memorable occasion, "es hijo de sus obras." Without realizing it, our hero indicated himself. Now, "Bob" will take great pleasure not only in forgetting his Spanish but a lot of other things he learned at College. Yet if his chance at the Phi Beta Kappa of the College of Hard Knocks is as good as it was at Carolina, we are betting on him considerable iron men.

If we had to forecast "Bob's" future, we'd say, "Fair and warmer." We might add, "Sunny," if only to see that warm blush of modesty mantle his fair brow. But "Bob's" bid for immortality is more than academic progress and personal pulchritude. He was a likely prospect for the wrestling team, and only his mercurial propensity for getting over or under weight prevented his making the team. In his Senior year, also, "Bob" showed an uncanny faculty for assimilating lucrative jobs with large emoluments and satisfactory perquisites attached. May we predict a brilliant career as a C. P. A.? Dixit, "Bob" "Cada uno es hijo de sus obras."

JEWELL was the chief treasure of Third Floor before the Co-ed house burned. Her room was the confessional for lovelorn, homesick and otherwise "blue" inmates of both Second and Third. However violent might be the weeping, wailing and gnashing of teeth, Jewell was always right there with a feather pillow and a stick of candy, metaphorically speaking.

Seriously—and Jewell is serious—she is already on the road to success in real "man's" business. Even now, she holds a responsible position in Thomasville and is raking in the dough. What is more, she was out of school long enough to earn enough—and more—to satisfy Mr. J. A. Warren for five quarters and to hang a Φ B K key about her neck, and yet she couldn't vote till this year. As her room-mate used to say: "Oh, Jewell's got sense, Jewell has."

His name, Smiley, is appropriate, for he is always smiling, always ready to join in the fun, whether it be in the form of a bull session or in the form of working a complicated A. C. problem.

To list his activities would require too much space, but the Engineering School can boast of few better all-round men; Phi Beta Kappa knows him as one of its own; the track squad claims him as one of its best; the Glee Club has to have him before it can sing; radio station 4-WE has to have him before it can transmit; and the Senior Class in Electrical Engineering would not be complete without him.

We hate to lose you, Smiley, for you leave a big gap in our ranks, but we realize that you must go on to fields of greater opportunity, and we wish you success.

DORSEY DEWEY SMITH

Degree: A.B., Education

Age: 20

THIS sturdy youngster "blew in" from Scotland County some four years since, and after successfully combating the initial visit of his admirers among the Sophomore Class, settled down to hard work. Due to his remarkably pleasing traits of character and his clear understanding of men, he has developed into one of these unassuming, likable fellows for which Carolina is justly famous. Although he parts his hair in the middle with infinite care, he is said to tolerate co-education and the arboretum only as necessary evils.

In his class work, he has become especially addicted to the study of History and Government. Having constantly camped on the trail of one "Prof. Connor," he has at last carved a comfortable niche in the esteem and affection of that worthy gentleman.

We hear that he is seriously considering a career on the tempestuous sea of pedagogy. Bon voyage, "D. D.," the venerable "Order of the Birch Rod" always extends a hearty welcome to conscientious energetic men of your stamp.

His ability to wade through Medicine has convinced us all that success is surely his, and the patient who calls to see Dr. Smith will soon learn that he is a real doctor as well as a real man. We predict for him a great success in whatever branch of the profession he may choose.

THEL, strange to say, has not acquired a nickname while in school here. Perhaps that is because his appearance suggests nothing other than "lady's man," which is harder to say than his real name.

Thel was seized with the desire to become a pharmacist while in high school. This desire grew until the Fall of 1923 when he began his career as a Pharmacy student, answering to the roll on the first day and not grating a class thereafter. Even though most of his time in College has been devoted to his work, which he considers a pleasure rather than a burden, he has found plenty of time to make friends with all with whom he has come in contact. It is useless to think of anything less than success for him, for his ability and determination combined offer nothing other than a big future.

Thel is full of life and cheerfulness, and that girl at Meredith whom he talks of so much in his sleep would certainly be a foolish lady to turn down such a good man.

W. G., as he is generally known among his friends, is in many ways a typical Med. student. Hard-working and conscientious to a degree, he never lets pleasure or other interests interfere with the pursuit of knowledge in his chosen field. He has made an enviable record in his course. Nevertheless, he has found time to cultivate the social side, and his courteous bearing, coupled with many admirable qualities, have won for him many friends among his classmates, while his many feminine admirers attest to the fact that he "has a way" with the fair sex that is the envy of many of his less fortunate brothers.

"W. G." is going to Pennsylvania next year and we predict that the same qualities that made for his success here will continue with him there and on into the bigger training school of life.

THIS gentleman is entitled to the distinction of having passed through College without having been a Sophomore in the truest sense of the word. One year at Wake Forest, Summer Schools, and a year at the University place him in the possession of a degree. His motto is: "All things come to him who waits, provided he works while he waits." History is his delight while Math is his hobby. We predict that his feet shall tread, round after round, the ladder that leads to success in the teaching world.

He is a great admirer of the fair sex if, as he says, they are "built right." He also spends much time in telling what an ideal woman should look like. Further, he stoutly defends a woman's right to change her mind, but admits that she might use discretion, occasionally. Should he cling to the former and eschew the latter, though now one, twain he shall be, yet one.

Due to the short time spent here, Snider has not taken an active part in College activities, although at heart he is in the midst of them all, as was shown by his participation in debates and athletics at Wake Forest.

A World-War veteran who returned from his wanderings in France to engage in the teaching profession to which he is now returning, he is exemplifying his conclusion that, "A man who qualifies for his calling, never fails of employment in it."

ABE" has many ambitions. Among these are: taking a graduate course at Harvard; making an extensive cruise in a yacht; being an expert C. P. A.; developing Strongfort shoulders; and taking the tennis team to Annapolis.

We hope that the midshipmen do not beat him on the tennis court as they did in the parlor—they beat him a love game there. But as "Abe" is going to Harvard next year, and will doubtless make his "H" in tennis, we expect him to make a strong comeback.

We regret very much that his numerous trophy cups will go with him. They will be greatly missed in the drinking season.

Had one of the Senior superlatives been the soundest sleeper, "Abe" would have been "Champ." He can go to sleep in nothing flat, but the rule doesn't work vice versa worth a nickel. We must admit, though, that like Abraham Lincoln, he is wide awake what time he isn't sleeping.

THIS intellectual young man with the curly locks, so much admired by the fair sex, is none other than Jimmie Spoon who hails from the "Queen City of the South."

Spoon, during his years at the U. N. C., has made many friends, which is quite an accomplishment, for the making of friends is synonymous with success.

All-in-all, Spoon is quite the boy, and those that know him have little doubt but that he will be a success in life. His popularity and business ability are further attested by the fact that when a secretary is to be elected, it seems that spoon is always selected and, strange to say, he always fills the bill. If it's a political frame-up, or a game of bridge, or friendly bull session, spoon is always there to take an active part, but he is always burning the midnight oil over some Pharmacy problems. Spoon's chief hobbies are Chemistry 35 and rolling pills, and we are expecting to hear great things from him in the Pharmacy World, for Pharmacy seems to be his calling after departing from us, and we wish him great success in his chosen profession.

THIS worthy lad hails from the hills. In our estimation, he is an excellent example of "mountaincrism," except for one thing, he is shy of the gentler sex. Perhaps his gentlemanly nature revolts against the cave-man characteristics of his fellows. This, however, is merely hypothetical. We admit that if he knew as much about the women as he does about Chemistry, he would have a distinct advantage over the rest of us.

He is an unassuming youth, but those who really know him can give ample proof of his unusual intellectual ability. He gave Phi Beta Kappa a close call, but French was his "Jonah." RUSSELL drifted into Chapel Hill some four years ago from Southern Pines, the resort which has been made famous by its proximity to Pinehurst. Although not entirely corrupted by living in the midst of golf and fox-hunting, pink teas and dancing, it required only a year at Oak Ridge and a Carolina Summer School to finish him entirely. He has been a changed man since subjecting himself to the baneful influence of Carolina during the summer months when Co-eds run rampant.

Russell has been disgustingly proficient in the small matter of passing courses, but it is not for this that he will be remembered. His cheery personality and his readiness to help out in any difficulty have made his graduation a real loss to Carolina. We see him leave with deep regret, and hope that next year will see him back in pursuit of a Ph D — anything to keep him in Chapel Hill.

This downright honest man hails from the environment of Eastern North Carolina, from the small "pueblo" called Mackeys. Herbert has the honor of boasting an A.B. degree within three years and three Summer Schools, also to his credit it may be added that he has worked during his three years here at Swain Hall.

Coming here with his pockets empty, he has accomplished more than an ordinary man would think possible. Empty pockets have not marred Herbert's good nature in the least, for underneath it all is a heart that wins the esteem of any man as well as that of the opposite sex. With all his seriousness, however, "Joe" has not failed to indulge in the society of the opposite sex; in fact, it is generally known that the diminishing popularity of a certain Rudolph with the ladies in these parts is largely due to the maneuvers of "Joe."

We must not get the idea that he devotes all of his time to books, because he finds time to show his feelings toward the ladies. He is quite an ardent "wooer," because we recall many occasions when those mystic wiles and dimpled smiles have been the cause of many a lass losing grip on her heart. During his sojourn in the School of Commerce, Cecil has made a very creditable and enviable record. His analytical mind and persistent effort have always rewarded him with a solution of the most baffling of problems. Now that he is leaving us to enter his career of banking, there is no doubt in our minds that with the abilities he possesses, he will succeed there as well as here, and will be a banker that can be banked upon as well as with.

THIS likable and unassuming chap is a product of the weedy Stokes, but you'd never guess it, unless you slipped into his sanctum while he was in the act of expatiating about his tobacco crop.

Tut's precocious intellect causes us to conclude that nothing short of a versatile genius could more gracefully expose himself to work in that quiet and enviable manner, and still take his successes and honors in the same way.

Alas, alas! What a weak and silly thing is the human heart! Cupid is playing havoc with this brunette, and predicts either matrimony or suicide. But even though Tamour est tout, we know that his dalliance in paradise will not carry him so far astray that he cannot slip back into the straight and narrow way.

WE have known Wesley for some time and have found no fault with him. He has that cheerfulness that will cause him to win a place in the hearts of all. He is sincere, frank, and honest. He has spent his four years of College life in "Carr Barn" and has been known as the Freshman's Friend. Had it not been for a Latin course in his Freshman year, he would now be wearing a Phi Beta Kappa key. He has one weakness, however, and that is a fondness for the opposite sex. There is some fair lady in Durham who yearns for each Saturday to come, because she knows that the bus from Chapel Hill will bring a certain passenger.

He is a good student, a loyal friend, and a true Carolina man, and we feel fortunate in having been associated with him during our College life. Although we regret to see him leave us, we know that he will succeed in whatever he undertakes.

TONY," as his friends affectionately call him, joined us in the Engineering School in the year 1921. A student he was not in his Freshman year, though he passed all of his work. A bull session with his friends or a social function meant life to him. But his four years in the Engineering School have wrought many changes. The hardest worker in the Senior Class, he has developed the scientific attitude of mind. Radio, by the way, is his special field, and he bids fair to be the Steinmetz of radio. "Tony" plans to spend the rest of his life in radio research, and those of us who have seen him at work, believe that the radio world has much to look forward to in the future.

Apart from his work, he is a jolly good fellow, always ready with his bit of fun or, in case of trouble, with a helping hand. "Tony" is one whom we have learned to like, admire, and respect, for he is a man.

WITH great wonder in his merry eyes he came from the wilds of South Carolina to view the civilization of the North. And like all of us he has profited from the sight thereof, in that he has come to realize that a College education is not the means whereby we heap and hoard vast quantities of the material, but that it offers the opportunity for us to make life more livable by improving the intangible qualities, by developing the aesthetic tastes, and by cultivating a broad mind. It is sad, but true, nevertheless, that a large percentage of us do not realize the presence of this opportunity, and therefore cannot take advantage of it. But, "Judge," having a fertile mind, being an acute observer, and possessing an intellect unusually keen, has gained much in his sojourn here.

There are two kinds of success—a success that is measured in dollars and another measured in happiness. We doubt not that "Judge" will attain success in the former sense even as he has already attained a large degree of success in the latter one.

CASSIA was born in South Dakota, but in her early youth moved to the little town of Cullowhee in the mountains of North Carolina. This brown-eyed person, with her high purposes and ideals, descended from the Land of the Sky in 1923 to spread a little joy in Chapel Hill.

Owing to the joy she spreads around one person in particular, we dare to prophesy that teaching will not hold the chief place in her future life. As a casual observer, one would gather that her motto is "never let education interfere with dates." However, hats off to her intellect; her dates don't seem to interfere with her grades, for she comes out with flying colors.

THE name, "Milly," to many a young man would bring back memories of some fair young damsel, but the "Milly" with whom we deal here would hardly fill that description. He may be fair and he may be young, but he is certainly no damsel, if four years in Doc Lawson's gymnasium has anything to do with the upbuilding of real men.

A glance at the Registrar's records will show that he has not wasted his time, although he is not at all anxious to have his deeds and achievements shouted from the rooftops. He claims an average of the "gentleman's grade." Besides scholastic ability, "Milly" has displayed rare common sense in working cross-word puzzles, especially on his eight-thirties.

Four years of College life have left no wrinkles on his brow, and we hope that his characteristic good humor will carry him on to future success.

CEDRIC," as he is familiarly known, hails from Snow Hill and, as if living up to the name of his home town, he is a perfect blonde. Because of this peculiarity, he rivals Valentino in his endless conquest of feminine hearts.

"Pat" entered Dean Carroll's school when he first came to the University, and has made an enviable record here. He has at times shown touches of genius, and has supplemented his study of Manufacturing Theory by frequent ventures into the practical. His latest venture won him the title of the "Rat-trap-King."

But it is not to be inferred from the above that he is all work and no play, for he has entered heartily into campus activities. Neither has he neglected the social side of his education. Although shy at first, one term of Summer School broke him, and since then his presence has been felt at every social event.

Although given to theorizing and much cogitation he possesses a strong, steady, resourceful character.

THIS disciple of Dudley Carroll needs no introduction to the inmates of the University. However, it may be well to give a few facts about him for the benefit of those unfortunates who have been denied the pleasure of his acquaintance. Roy is one of the hardest workers on the campus. Whether the matter in hand be a problem in business organization, publishing the "Guilford County Bulletin," or busting a heart, he goes about it with the same painstaking thoroughness. How he finds time to keep well up in his Jewish Engineering studies, participate in various campus activities, and conduct two successful affairs de coeur at one and the same time is a puzzle even to his roommates. His philosophical mien and certain locomotive peculiarities have often caused him to be mistaken for a distinguished Professor of English. Roy says the honor is all the professor's.

It is safe to predict that this gentleman will one day occupy a high place in his chosen work.

SOMEWHERE in the mountains of North Carolina there was born a babe whose future was destined to entwine many of the thrilling adventures of this life; and the story is better told by this same individual who has grown to be a man in the person of Wayne T. Wells. Young in age, yet old in experience, he leaves us; and as he departs, we are saddened, yet joyed: saddened because we are losing a friend and a narrator who delves into the phases and aspects of life; and it comes from his own ingenuity with words combined with those essentials of truth which are personal experience and travel. We are joyed because we are anxious that he may gather in his own rich deserts which we know he can obtain only through a continuation of his old nomadic career. 'Tis thus that we part with a friend, a gentleman, and a cavalier, and wherever he goes, may he meet with the same joy and sincerity in fellowship that we are able to bestow upon him and he upon us. Good-by and luck to you, Wells!

AFTER one year's preparation at Wake Forest, West entered the University in the Fall of 1922 and registered with Dean Noble. He entered with the Class of '24, but after one year of studying he decided to receive more training in his chosen field. He re-entered in the Fall of 1924 and finished with the Class of '25. Due to the fact that he picked a front seat under Dr. Howell, he received more than his proportion of questions, but with a master mind he answered correctly and precisely nearly every question given him, even the one concerning the "most important line in France." To West can well be applied Caesar's words, "Veni, vidi, vici," for he entered the University with a determination to conquer, which he has done, and we expect great things of him in the future.

It goes without saying that West is an ideal fellow. He is studious, yet a "Duke" among the ladies, for they fall for his winning personalities. "On to Raleigh" (Meridith) means a great deal to him. A listener often finds himself being entertained in "air castles" which he builds for the future—"castles" splendors suffice for a King, yet a "Duke"—just a bungalow, red roses and—

STUDENT" is a Tar Heel at least, although he does come from our sister State to the south, the one famous for "Sand Lappers" and Palmettos.

The name, although it does describe pretty accurately his occupation, was given him in exchange for one less sonorous, perhaps, but far more appropriate, that of "Cadet" which was won while located on Major Bingham's now famous heights.

"Student" entered the School of Liberal Arts immediately upon his first appearance on The Hill, and it seems that he made a wise choice, for a very liberal education has he received. Drifting around from Mathematics, through Geology and then into English and History, he has displayed a trace of natural indecision but an extraordinarily versatile mind. As is characteristic of that mind, he is thoughtful, yet forgetful; steady, yet changeable; and given to many and various moods.

But he is sociable as well as studious, and hardly a dance passes without being graced by his presence, which on such occasions, adds life, fun and pleasure.

He is a MAN; everybody agrees to that, but he is more than just a MAN. We have never met a person with such a combination of good attributes, pious, sublime, yet a "reg'lar guy."

"Tom" tackles problems with a zeal that would cause many to turn green with envy, but he goes Napoleon one better—he has yet to meet his Waterloo. He has found time to complete his B.S. in Comm. in three years (majoring in Mr. Peacock's Accounting), during his short visits to us on The Hill—his visits were short, because he has been able to spare but few moments from a certain little girl among the hills of Guilford County.

There is a certain young lady in G'boro who has claimed many week-ends and often mid-week days, and we can hardly say that "Rex" has spent four years with us. When he hears her call, there is only one answer from him. "I will."

He has been a Godsend to our Commerce School. His merry laughs, his good cheer, and his authoritative references as to "how it's done in the automobile trade," have taken much of the drudgery out of our work.

His educational campaign has been conducted on the principle, "The last shall be first and the first shall be last," for he completed his Junior and Senior work during the first two years and then took his Freshman and Sophomore subjects. He could not resist the lure of the B.S. degree. In spite of heavy responsibilities—a wife and two children—he has gone about his task in a quiet and effective way, recording for himself high scholastic standing. Steady in purpose, consistent in effort, and loyal in interest, he has won the admiration of both students and Faculty.

SELDOM do we meet a person of Hal's type. One who presents a happy combination of good humor and honest straightforwardness, a scorner of sentimentalities and an attractive personality. These have gone far toward making Hal a leader among his classmates and among those who know him.

Through his ability to overcome any odds, and win, Hal has been accorded many honors, among them being one of the only three members of his class to be elected to the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society. He was also made assistant in Pharmacy for the last year, thus convincing all of his ability in the profession.

Not only is Hal a leader among men but also among women. His attachment to the fair sex is reported to be concentrated at present among the young ladies at Greensboro College, although a damsel from Rose Hill has tied his heartstrings and it is reported that the attachment is far from being one-sided. Nevertheless, according to circumstantial evidence, Hal is a much-sought-after person.

HILL is truly one of the most versatile men that grace the departing Class of '25. His many-sided personality has made itself felt in practically every phase of campus life. It is not often that one can go through College and find that the keynote to success is the skillful apportionment of one's time so that every branch of College life receives its proper attention, and that is what Hill has done.

Through his entire College career, he has been a most successful track man. Then, too, he really makes a most creditable poet, some of his verses having actually been accepted by the Carolina Magazine. The peculiar trait of his character that makes it unique is that with all of his varied social, literary and athletic pursuits, he has not neglected his studies and has made an enviable record through his grades.

At the end of his College career, he should consider himself fortunate. Hill is leaving Carolina with the satisfaction of knowing that he is taking with him everything that College can give to a man and is leaving behind a record of which he should be justly proud.

Degree: Special

Zeta Psi Fraternity; Sceptic Club; Wake County Club; Cosmos Club; Chevy Chase Club (Washington, D. C.); President, North Carolina Historical Association; North Carolina Bar Association; Judge, Superior Court North Carolina.

"Judge" is perhaps the most unique of Carolina students. Re-entering College at the age of sixty, he brought the richness of a mind alert and the results of a life spent before the Bar and as a Judge of the Superior Court of North Carolina.

Judge Winston is a man of unusual individuality and charm. He has become quickly acquainted with the new customs and practices of College life, and has fitted himself into the activities of Carolina as easily as he must have done some forty years ago.

The Junior Class is proud of Judge Winston; he has added much to Carolina and has given the Class of '26 the distinction of naming among its members the oldest and most distinguished "Junior" in the United States.

FRATERNITIES

Fraternity Superlatives

UNOFFICIAL

DELTA KAPPA EPSILON: Oldest chapter existing on the campus. Beta Chapter established in 1851, just ten years before the American Civil War.

BETA THETA PI: Most prominent in campus activities, its members holding the largest number of student officers of any fraternity group on the campus.

PHI KAPPA SIGMA: Greatest number of men in the Carolina Playmakers.

SIGMA ALPHA EPSILON: Owns the most attractive fraternity house on The Hill.

ZETA PSI: Predominantly composed of men from Eastern North Carolina. Has most spacious dance floor in any fraternity house.

CHI PHI: First of the old ante bellum fraternities to be re-established at Carolina.

ALPHA TAU OMEGA: Most prominently represented on the Faculty roll at Carolina.

KAPPA ALPHA: Quietest and most easygoing fraternity.

PHI DELTA THETA: Most beautiful fraternity pin on the campus. Smallest membership roll of any local chapter.

SIGMA NU: Largest and newest chapter house.

SIGMA CHI: Largest local chapter membership. Houses greatest number of its own men of any chapter.

KAPPA SIGMA: Greatest number of prominent athletes. Three fourths of the three Southern Basketball Champion teams have been of this fraternity.

PI KAPPA ALPHA: Most reserved and conservative fraternity.

PI KAPPA PHI: Group having representatives in practically all campus and student affairs.

DELTA SIGMA PHI: Smallest number of men on the Faculty roll.

THETA CHI: For many years has produced greatest number of baseball players of any fraternity.

DELTA TAU DELTA: Most unassuming. Chapter house most distant from campus and located on the largest piece of ground owned by any fraternity.

SIGMA PHI EPSILON: Largest number of Law students.

ACACIA: Most mature members. The only fraternity within a fraternity.

CHI TAU: Greatest number of Intercollegiate debaters.

CHI OMEGA: Best students.

PI BETA PHI: Best all-round group.

ATHLETICS

Some Outstanding Achievements Since the Inauguration of the Present Athletic System and Management

Carolina has won all baseball games from Virginia save one.

In baseball, Carolina has won 74 games and lost 42.

In basketball, Carolina has won 53 games and lost 4.

In football, Carolina has won 29 contests and lost 21.

Carolina has won four State Championships in track.

Carolina won the Southern Championship in tennis in 1922.

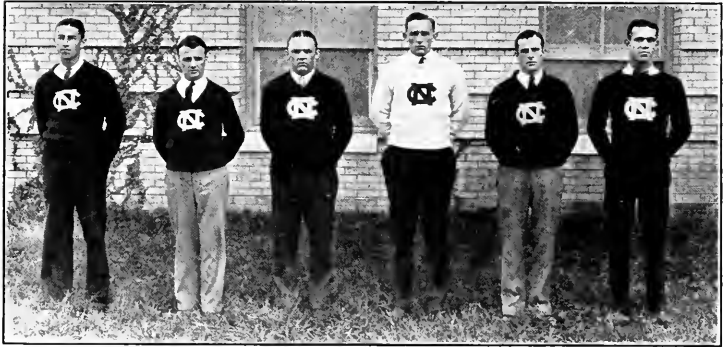

Carolina Athletes have set new State Records and new University Records in: 1-mile, 2-mile, pole vault, javelin and discus.

Holt Moore went to the semi-finals in Olympic tryouts in competition with the best hurdlers in America.

"Mule" Shirley went to the Washington Senators and played on the World's Championship team.

Carolina has won 14 out of 22 possible State Championships in four major sports.

64.4% of all games in all sports including Yale games and poor seasons have been victories for Carolina.

SEASON BY SCORES

Carolina	6	Wake Forest	7
Carolina	0	Yale	27
Carolina	6	Trinity	0
Carolina	10	State	0
Carolina	0	Maryland	6
Carolina	7	South Carolina	10
Carolina	3	V. M. I.	0
Carolina	0	Virginia	7

From the standpoint of scores, our season was not impressive. However, it is a part of the Fetzer system, under which we have been for the past four years and for which we have a grand average of 76.2% (excluding Yale games), to urge the men to go down to Emerson Field daily and fight for the game; to learn to fight squarely and fairly; and to let the scores take care of themselves. Such is their philosophy and, win or lose, coaches, while you continue to teach it, we are back of you to a man. The Student Body of North Carolina can never be said to be "fair weather sailors," only.

Carolina went into the Thanksgiving Game on Lambeth Field ready for the crucial game of the season. On it depended the success or failure of the season. Those men went in there picked to lose, but they still had that determination to play the game for all they were worth. Carolina was depending on Merritt to bear the brunt of the attack and to do all the punting, but an injury to his ankle forced the fullback out of the game after the first quarter. Sparrow was then forced to take up the burden of outpunting Maphis. Quite a job, but he did it.

Well, Virginia won the game. Cuddy, taking quick advantage of a Carolina fumble, recovered the ball on our 8-yard line. Then Diffey, the outstanding Virginia player on the field, carried it across the line for the winning and only score of the game. It was Virginia's first victory over Carolina since 1920.

Bonner's running back of punts, the work of Epstein on the defense, the punting of Sparrow, and the all-round fighting spirit of Captain Matthews (playing his last game for Carolina), were the features of the game from our standpoint.

WIN FROM STATE

The Annual Fair Week Game with N. C. State resulted in a 10-0 victory for the Tar Heels, making it four out of six wins for Carolina since gridiron relations were resumed in 1910. A crowd of about 15,000 persons saw the game, exceeding the record-breaking crowd of the year before when 13,000 saw Carolina administer a 14-0 defeat to the Farmers. Carolina's 10 points were made by Sparrow, as the result of a dropkick from the 17-yard line and an intensive air attack which was inevitable.

MARYLAND UNABLE TO CROSS OUR LINE ON THE GROUND

Carolina made a very favorable showing against the strong Maryland team which last season tied the Pennsylvania team in Philadelphia and defeated us 14-0. The margin of Maryland victory this time was Hall, a marvelous drop-kicker. He shot the ball through the goal posts twice during the game; once from the 40- and once from the 25-yard line.

SOUTH CAROLINA COMES FOR REVENGE

South Carolina, led by their redoubtable Meyer, came to The Hill on November 1st, determined on revenge for the overwhelming defeat we handed them in their own backyard last season. In that game the Tar Heels made 21 first downs, scored 13 points, and at the same time held the Gamecocks scoreless and first downless. In the game this year Carolina made 7 first downs to 4 for South Carolina, but they won 10-7. Devin scored Carolina's touchdown with the finest exhibition of broken field running of the game.

DEFEAT V. M. I.

Carolina met V. M. I. in Chapel Hill on November 8th in the homecoming game of the year. Smarting under two successive defeats, the Tar Heels played the best game of the year and won 3-0. It was Jack Merritt, hard-smashing fullback, who was mainly responsible for this victory, and incidentally it was the second time in three years he has battered his way through and around the Flying Cadets. It was his 37-yard run around right end in the third quarter that paved the way for a drop-kick by Quarterback Hackney, substituting for Devin, that won the game.

ADMINISTER DAVIDSON HER FIRST HOME DEFEAT IN HISTORY

Carolina overturned a lifelong precedent by defeating Davidson on her homegrounds, the score being 6-0, the result of two drop-kicks by Hackney. Carolina made 15 first downs to 5 for Davidson.

EASILY DEFEAT DUKE

Starting the season with a new coach, Duke had not built up much of a team when we met them. They did play a good defensive game, however, holding our second string to a 6-0 score.

WAKE HAD GOOD TEAM

Losing to Wake Forest by a lone point was the greatest upset of the season. However, Wake Forest claims to have had the best team in her history, and considering the strength of her team, and the fact that they easily defeated Washington and Lee (considered by many as the outstanding team in the Southern Conference), our 1-point defeat was no disgrace.

Baseball, the Season

Carolina enjoyed a successful baseball season in that the Tar Heels made a clean sweep of the Virginia series, winning in Charlottesville, in Chapel Hill, and in Greensboro. Virginia has beaten us, then, only once in four seasons. Quite a record in itself.

The team got off to a good start by capturing the opening contest with Guilford, 6-0. The heavy bat of "Casey" Morris, together with the superb twirling of the Carolina aces, Bryson and Ferebee, turned the trick. They allowed but 4 hits between them for the game.

The next game, with Elon, went ten innings, Carolina winning, 3-2. This time it was "Hoot" Gibson, right fielder, who sent in the winning run with a slashing triple in the tenth.

Captain Bryson hurled one of the greatest games of his career in the game with Trinity in Durham on April 10th, which the Tar Heels won, 1-0. It was a pretty pitching duel between the Carolina hurler, and Sanderson for the Methodists: each allowing only 3 hits. Bryson, however, kept his scattered.

The annual Easter Monday Game with Davidson was dropped in Gastonia by the score of 7-6. Carolina had apparently sewed the game up behind the masterly pitching of Ferebee when Coach Bill decided to relieve him and try out some of the more inexperienced pitchers. Davidson soon got onto the delivery of Moore, Poyner, and Coltrane, who in turn succeeded Ferebee and themselves, and won the game.

Lenoir was met in Hickory, and Carolina again lost, 3-1. Moose, pitching for Lenoir, kept his hits well scattered and received fine assistance from his teammates. Bryson was the losing pitcher, although he only allowed 5 hits and issued 1 pass. He struck out nine men. Moose gave up 6 hits, fanned 6 and walked none.

CAROLINA INVADES VIRGINIA

Following these two defeats, the Tar Heels next invaded Virginia, and defeated in succession, V. P. I., Washington & Lee, and Virginia. The team defeated the Virginians 7-4, before a crowd of 3,500 persons. Bryson, for the ninth time, held the Virginians at bay.

Returning to The Hill, the Tar Heels played an erratic game against Wake Forest on April 20th, and the Baptists won, 10-3. The team made 7 errors, while Wake chalked up 4. Ferebee and Coltrane replaced Bryson in succession after the second inning, but they fared even worse. Jones pitched well for Wake Forest, yielding but 6 hits.

In the second game of the series with Virginia, Carolina again won, but it required 10 innings to do it. A crowd of 5,000 saw "Rabbit" Bonner, lead-off man in the eighth inning, start the fireworks with a double to center. A single by Coffee, Morris' sacrifice fly and an error by the Virginia catcher sent Bonner and Coffee across the plate with the tying runs. It was in the tenth that "Touchdown" Jones smote the ball through shortstop and sent Morris home with the winning run. It was Bryson's tenth victory over the Old Dominion lads in baseball. Holland pitched for Virginia.

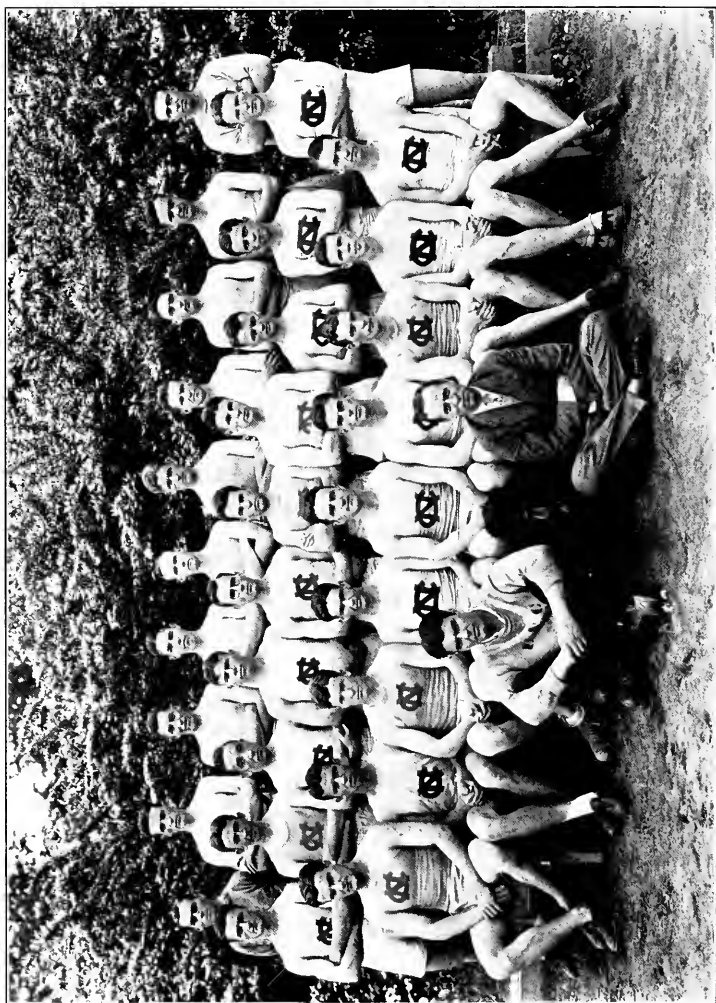

The third game of the series was played the following day in Greensboro, and it was a slugfest which Carolina got the best of, and won, 13-9. A crowd estimated at 7,000 saw the contest. Virginia fought hard to prevent a clean sweep, but Captain Bryson, Virginia's nemesis, rushed to the breach in the third inning and, relieving Coltrane, held the game in the palm of his hand until the ninth, when a belated rally almost caused the Tar Heels trouble.

Following an easy win over Hampden-Sydney, the Tar Heels lost a heartbreaking game to State on our homegrounds by the score of 3-2. Coffee's homer with McDonald on in the first proved not enough to hold the Farmers in. They came from behind, supported by superb pitching, in the fifth and tied the score and won the game in the sixth. Bryson, except for the fatal fifth and sixth frames, did not allow a single safety. Playing the final game of the series in Raleigh the following Monday, State again overcame a 2-run lead, obtained in the first inning, and definitely put the Carolina team out of the race for State title, winning, 7-2.

For the third successive game, the Carolina team opened the first frame by scoring 2 runs, only to be nosed out later in the game. The third time was against Trinity. For the second time, this 2-run lead was due to a home run, and each time McDonald was on base. In this game, Captain Bryson faced the pitching ace of the Methodists. Both men were hit freely, Carolina connecting for 8 safeties off Dempster, and the Methodists retaliating with 7 off Bryson. Spikes was the outstanding Trinity player of the game. He got 4 hits out of 4 trips, 2 singles, a homer and a triple. McDonald was the big man at the bat for Carolina. He got 2 singles and a triple.

Next, Carolina jumped off on the Southern trip minus four regulars who were unable to make the trip because of studies and injuries. Those unable to go were Captain Bryson, "Rabbit" Bonner (who split his finger on a foul ball during the Trinity Game), John Coffee, and "Monk" McDonald. Handicapped by the loss of these regulars, the team had as unsuccessful a trip as the Northern one was successful. Every game of the trip was lost; two games to Mercer, two to Alabama, and two to Georgia.

The last game of the season was a corker. It was played at Wake Forest with the Baptists, and it turned out to be a pitchers' battle between Jones of Wake, and Poyner of Carolina. The battle lasted 12 long innings and ended with Wake Forest holding the 3 end of a 2-3 score. During the game, the Wake boys secured 8 hits off Poyner's delivery, while Carolina was connecting 7 safe times.

Track, the Season

Track is probably Coach Bob's hobby, though he doesn't admit it during football season. When he came to Carolina four years ago, he immediately set about to revive interest in the cinder-track sport. He often appeared before the students in Chapel and urged them to go out for track, pointing out the opportunities for development along these lines. He agrees with those sport writers who regard track as the weakest feature of Southern Athletics, and he is determined not to remain peaceably by and let such a condition exist.

The Season of 1924 was the most successful ever enjoyed by a University Track team, and it is a splendid tribute to Coach Bob and the tireless band of men who were willing to work.

During the season, seven University records were broken and all of them were better than the corresponding State records. Except for the Conference Meet in Charlottesville, the Tar Heels went through the season undefeated, and even at Charlottesville, where they took second place, they scored four first places, which were more than all the other entrants put together, the University of Virginia excepted.

The University and State records bettered were made by Captain O. M. Abernethy of Charlotte, when he threw the javeline 180 feet at the Triangular Meet with Georgia and South Carolina; by F. P. Parker of Goldsboro, who ran the half-mile in 1 minute 50 3-5 seconds at the University of Georgia; by Dale Ranson, Captain-elect of Huntersville, who ran the mile in the same meet in the good time of 4 minutes 30 2-5 seconds, with Harry Thach only a stride behind; by Cris Fordham of Greensboro, who threw the discus 127 feet 9 inches in the Conference Meet at Charlottesville; by John Purser of Charlotte, who ran the two-mile in the same meet in 9 minutes 58 1-5 seconds; by L. H. Moore of Faison, who made a new record in both the hurdle races in the Conference Meet, winning the 120-high hurdles in 15 3-5 and the 220-low hurdles in 25 seconds flat. All these records were of long standing, and many of them had been considered unbeatable in North Carolina.

The most decisive victory of the season was in the State Championships at Raleigh, from which the Tar Heels emerged 50 points ahead of their nearest rivals and scored more points than all the other competing teams combined. This meet furnished a splendid example of the teamwork which can exist on a track as well as in a basketball team, and illustrated the point-gathering ability of a well-rounded team. This is the third consecutive year that Carolina has won the State Meet, and the increasingly large score piled up each season in Raleigh offers eloquent testimony to the accumulative results of three years' efforts by the cinder men under the tutelage of Coach Bob. An outstanding achievement of the year was the work of Holt Moore in the Olympic tryouts. Moore took second place in the 120-high hurdles at the Yankee Stadium, and also placed second in the preliminary heat, thus qualifying for the semi-finals in the final Olympic tryouts at the Harvard Stadium.

Season for 1925 is very attractive in schedule:

April 4	—Washington & Lee at Chapel Hill
April 9	—V. P. I. at Chapel Hill
April 15	—University of Virginia at Charlottesville
April 16	—William & Mary at Williamsburg

Basketball, the Season

Three Southern Basketball Championships in four years and five South Atlantic Championships in as many years! Such is the way Carolina's record now stands. The Tar Heels won their third Southern crown in a final game with Tulane University on the night of March 3d, after the best teams of Dixie had been eliminated in the course of the five-day tourney.

From the stage of mediocrity in the days before the war and during the S. A. T. C., Carolina basketball teams have climbed until today they occupy the slippery peaks of fame. During the five seasons since the "return to normalcy," the Tar Heels have won 67 out of 86 games and have scored 2,982 points to the opponents' 1,965; more than a 1,000 lead. During the last three seasons, our team has lost 4 games and won 53! Four times in five years, State Champions, and once runners-up and three times winners in the Southern Tournament, our basketball team has played its part in a great system of athletics. Morgan Blake had this to say in his sport column after the last tournament: "to win three championships in four years against such stiff competition is one of the greatest athletic achievements, if not the greatest, in the history of Southern sports"

O. B. Keeler, another Atlanta sports writer, wrote after the tournament in the following vein:

"I wish I could find out the charm those five boys whispered, sitting close together on the floor, before they got up for the last charge . . . I would say it before many a golf shot, and whenever Bobby Jones stands on the first tee of a championship round. It must be good . . . It must be good, for in that final whirling rush of the white phantoms, they shot 6 field goals in three minutes . . . the most dazzling burst of scoring the entire tournament displayed. So far as I can remember, no other team broke away in this manner in all the tournament, even against an inferior adversary. And in this case the flash was against the supposedly-strongest defensive team in the field, and that team was leading with five minutes to go and the championship at stake.

"Note what happened after Carolina took time out, twice. The first time, Tulane was leading, 4-0. Carolina conferred and drew pictures on the floor. The next time the game was halted it was by Tulane, and the score was Carolina, 14; Tulane, 8. The Tar Heels had rung up 14 points to 4, after the conference . . . I wondered what they say when they get their heads together."

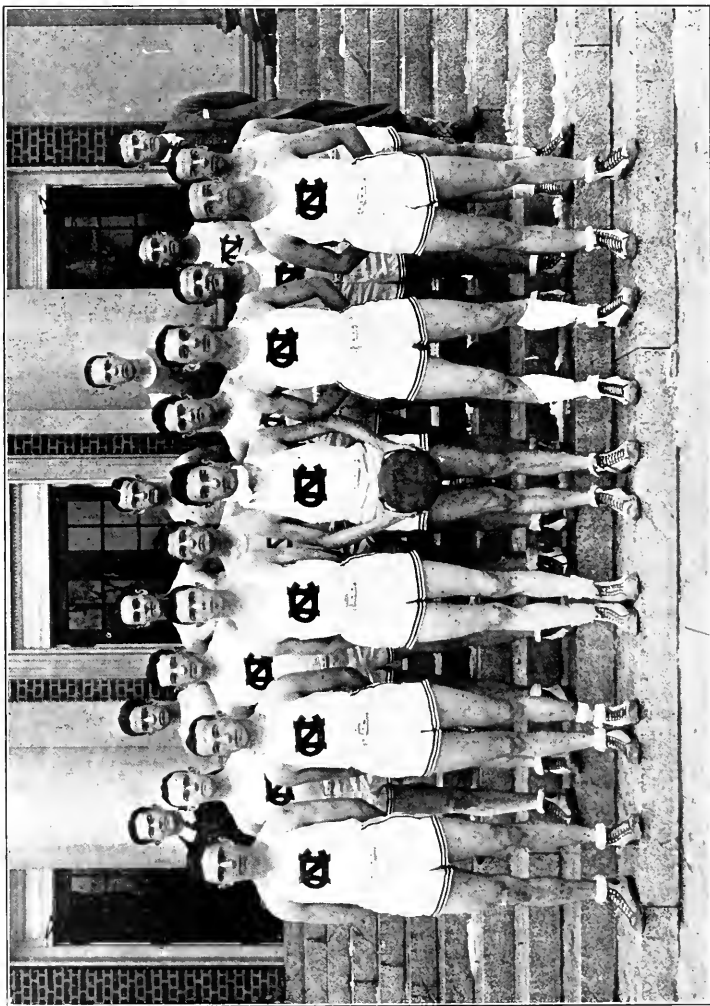

Captain Jack Cobb was for the second time in as many years the high scorer of the tournament, with 57 points. Henican of Tulane was second with 63, and Sam McDonald came third with 37. Cobb, Devin, and Dodderrer All-Southern.

To Washington & Lee and South Carolina go the honors of being the only Southern teams to defeat the Tar Heels. The South Carolina Game was lost by 1 point, and Washington and Lee had already been defeated once during the season.

One unusual feature of the past season was the game with N. C. State. The Raleigh Farmers had some trouble in finding the basket, scoring only 1 field goal during the entire game, that coming after about 30 minutes of play. The final score was 29-10.

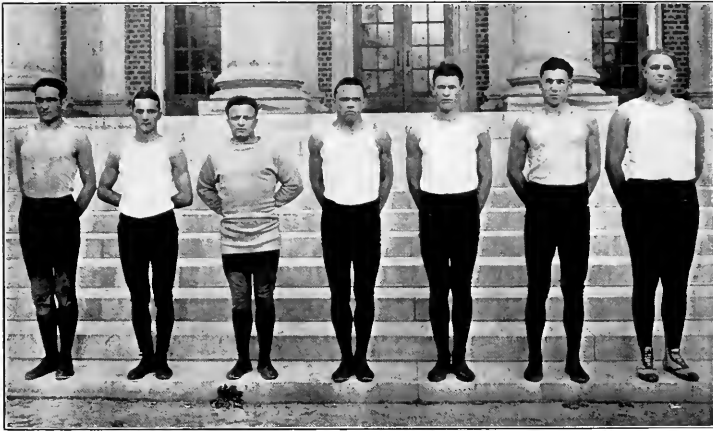

In the State, Duke gave the greater scare, holding our team on their court to a close score, 25-21. However, Captain Cobb was not in the game, being confined to the hospital because of illness. The return engagement with the Dukes ended 34-18. Cobb played.

Wake Forest, too, threatened to do something to our champions during the absence of Cobb. However, with Poole ably holding down the place of the sick captain, Wake fell, 22-18. The return engagement for that game ended 43-24. Guilford and Davidson, the other North Carolina teams played, met with a similar fate. The Guilford score was 37-10, while the Davidson Wildcats lost, 44-13.

Wrestling, the Season

(Season of 1924-25)

Wrestling has just gone through its third season as an Intercollegiate sport at Carolina. Three matches were won and five were lost. The Tar Heels defeated N. C. State, Raleigh Y, Concord Y, and lost to Davidson, Washington & Lee, Virginia, V. P. I., and V. M. I.

The season, while not a glowing success, has not discouraged those interested in the development of the sport here at the University. Largely under the guidance of Coach Shapiro, who received his training at Harvard, wrestling was instituted three years ago, and steady progress has been made all the while.

It was not until last year that the Athletic Association officially recognized the new sport, and monograms were awarded for the first time.

Boxing

Boxing, too, has at last been started by a handful of students, and it has started with a bang. Organized and directed by Bill Cox, '25, of Rowland, and captained by Ad Warren, '26, of Blount's Creek, the team has just completed its first season of competition.

The first move was made along this direction last year by this same Cox. One match with Camp Bragg was the only one held, it having been thought the team too young to take on any seasoned College team. During the current year, the Ft. Bragg Soldiers have been met again, resulting in a victory for them. In addition, there have been matches with V. M. I., Washington & Lee, and Virginia. In all of these matches, Carolina was the loser, but consideration must be given to the fact that every team met was composed of seasoned veterans and men of several years' Intercollegiate competition, while ours was green.

So far, this newest sport has been without the support of the Athletic Association and without a coach. Corporal "Batling" Conway of Fort Bragg served in the capacity of coach for part of the year.

The fact that there were 3,000 people in attendance at the only home engagement of the boxers, that with Fort Bragg, testifies to the interest on the campus in this sport.

Abram Solomon was runner-up in the State Championship for the singles title. He lost to Harry Price in one of the hardest-fought matches ever played in the State. Five sets were required to decide the winner, and the two players were on the verge of exhaustion at the end. Carolina's two doubles teams fought out the championship between themselves in the doubles, each team eliminating all rivals who faced them during the tournament. The teams were composed of Smith and Solomon and Whitaker and Fuller. Smith and Solomon won in the play-off and are State Champions.

TAG FOOTBALL CHAMPIONS—FALL 1924

Intramural Sports

Paralleling the display of Varsity achievement on the Athletic Field has come an enormous increase in the number of students to whom athletic privileges have been made available.

The schedule during the year is as follows:

Tag Football	In the Fall: Cross-Country Running	Pushball
Basketball	In the Winter: Wrestling and Boxing	Indoor Track
Tennis	In the Spring: Horseshoes	Indoor Baseball

During the fall, more than 750 men participated in some form of standardized mass athletics. With duplications eliminated, the records show that over 500 students played in the official games. All-in-all, more than 1,000 students took part in some form of Intramural Athletics during the past year. That number is exclusive of the Varsity squads, and it means that over one half of the Student Body are taking part in athletics.

Nobody can doubt the value of this Intramural training. Men who could never make a scrub's place on the largest Varsity squad, have the thrill of being stars on their dormitory and fraternity teams. Leadership and capacity for management have been developed in the most unexpected students, exceptional ability in the most backward of them has been discovered and transferred to the Varsity field. Intramurals have come to stay at Carolina.

ORGANIZATIONS

The Students Publications Union is an organization of all students at the University, brought into existence by popular vote, that it might through its representatives, The Publications Board, exercise complete supervision over all student publications and provide for their administration and finances. Through this Board, the Publications Union controls four campus publications: the Tar Heel, the Carolina Magazine, the YACKETY YACK, and the new Buccaneer.

The Publications Board consists of five members: three elected from the Student Body and two appointed by the President of the University from the Faculty. During the past year, the membership of this Board has been as follows: Ludwig Lauerhass, president; William Way and William Couch; from the Faculty, Walter J. Matherly, treasurer, and Gerald W. Johnson, secretary.

THE CAROLINA PLAYMAKERS

The Carolina Playmakers is a fellowship of young playwrights, players, and craftsmen in stage-arts, united by a common interest in the establishment of a native folk-theater.

The Playmakers' poster above, by Mary de B. Graves of Chapel Hill (the home of the Playmakers), tells something of the range of the work—Blackbeard, pirate of the Carolina coast, looking to the past; the young mountain man, the mother and child, looking to the future. It suggests the expression of our native life and its perpetuation in these simple plays, toward a folk-theater of North Carolina; a theater which is contributing to the State a fresh consciousness of itself, its lore and its legends, its romantic history, and its stirring new life of to-day.

Deare Paw—

wel paw i rote u that mr. dr. greenlaw the english bull, thatz what thay kal a smart man up here, wuz goin to leve here and go noth or skule. I dont know him, but he mus be a good skolar for evry body wantz him to stay here. and that the basket ball team wun the suthrn shampianchip and that we had lectric lites al ova the kampus. wel i ment to tel u that i wint to cee the playmakers back in february but i forgot about it. u cee thay had just rekum back here frum there suthern trip whin thay giv playz al ova south carlina and gorgi. enny how whin thay kumz back thay givz the sho ova in memorial hall where thay haz chapele and spechez sorta lik thay do at our church up ther. to explain what the playmakers izz—today our math prof, which is what thay call the tetchers up here, said that the playmakers wuz a fine thing and that it wuz the mos renoun group of players of al the petticoat tayatrez, which is french for small shows, and thay it wuz fine for wun to be interested in the gramaticz but wun should not let it take up to mutch time from thayr studys. he sayz that it is so ezzy to let that kind of work take all yore time that ure liable to bust some corsez, i dont no what he menz but i think it wuz somethin about kloths, they do work u ova ther for wun of them tol me that they would work a willin hors to deth.

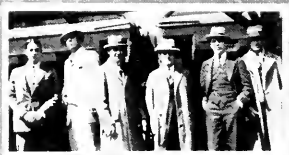

but to tel u about the sho—i dont rekolek much but thay had wun pla about a frog, nuthin but a kommon tode frog, which skared wun pore fello to death, an thay had reel thunda and litenin. thin mr. kotch made a speetch which wuz a reel speetch. he tol al about the trip south and everthin. paw that wuz a grate speetch and, from whut thay sa, hez a grate man. thin thay had another play bout a gurl an boy which wuz playin like they wuz married and they kooked eggz and faught with dishez and tore up the hous and—wel paw it was funy. evry body laffed and laffed, then thay had what they kalled a comedi which i dont know what it iz but it must mean somethin sad becaus nobody laffed. then i got sleepy and left. now u know whut the playmakers iz.

paw u no thay need somebody here to show them how to dig ditchez. i never saw so may ditches dug in al my lif. why thay dig a ditch and wate for it to rane and when it ranes the ditch dont work so thay put som iorn pipe in it to mark it and dig another ditch along side of it, then it ranes again and it dont work so thay dig another wun. non of them ever works so thay ar al the time diggin ditches everwhere. meby you could cum up here and sho them how to dig ditchez like yu do at hom.

o yeh i gav mr. warren that slip of paper u told me to and he red it and tol me to sen the wun that u find in this letr to yu. paw hez a grate man here.

wel im sleepy so goodby
yore onli sun,
willie

Lon: "Whom do you think was the most honored of all fraternity men?"

Don: "Don't ask me. Have I ever Baird any signs of such knowledge?"

Lon: "It was Moses. He had his first pin put on him by a princess."

—Whirlwind.

Y-Y

"Mother, who put the statue under the kitchen sink?"

"Sh-h, Jimmie, that's the plumber."

—Chapparral.

Y-Y

Room: "Hey, there! Don't spit on the floor!"

Mate: "'S matter, floor leak?"

—Exchange.

Y-Y

Little Girl: "Pa, it's raining."

Father: "Well, let it rain."

Little Girl: "I was goin' to, Pa."

—Drawl.

Y-Y

Teacher: "Johnny, what is the Japanese national hymn?"

Johnny: "California, here I come."

—Yale Record.

Y-Y

Customer: "This skunk coat is very fine, but will it stand rain?"

Salesman: "'Ecod, woman! Dids't ever see a skunk carry an umbrella?"

—Jester.

Y-Y

"We have a new baby at our home."

"Is it going to stay?"

"I think so."

"Why?"

"He didn't bring anything but a nightgown."

—W. Va. Moonshine.

Y-Y

He (after five minutes embarrassing silence): "Don't you think that the floor is unusually flat tonight?"

—Purple Cow.

Stag Number One: "That girl over there said she was sore at you."

Stag Number Two: "You mean that one masquerading as a map of the world?"

S. N. O.: "Yeah, that's the one. What's she sore about?"

S. N. T.: "Well, she asked me where I lived and then slapped me when I put my finger on the town."

—Moonshine.

Y-Y

Speaking of cigarettes: "Let the rest of the world go buy."

—Buccaneer.

Y-Y

"What's a fairy tale?"

"That depends on which way the ferry's going."

—Lampoon.

Y-Y

He: "Pardon me. May I have this dance?"

She: "No. I'm too danced out."

He: "You're not too damn stout. You're just pleasingly plump."

—Cornell Window.

Y-Y

"What would you call a man who hid behind a woman's skirt?"

"Damn skinny."

—Moonshine.

Y-Y

Son: "A fellow in school told me I looked like you Pop."

Pop (proudly): "And what did you say my son?"

Son: "Gee, Pop, he was bigger than I am."

—Punch Bowl.

Y-Y

"Then you won't marry me?"

"Certainly not."

"But darling, I don't understand at all. Why?"

"Even your best friends won't tell you."

—Sniper.

Chorus Girl: "She don't look good in anything."

Theatrical Manager: "You shouldn't say that. Say, 'she looks good in nothing.'"

Chorus Girl: "Naw, that ain't what I mean."

—Mercury.

Y-Y

One: "I see by the paper that Angie left town after a short stop."

Other: "No wonder, she always was crazy about athletes."

—Ranger.

Y-Y

She: "And what do you think Sir Walter Raleigh said when he placed his cloak at Queen Elizabeth's feet?"

He: "Step on it, kid—step on it!"

—Brown Jug.

Y-Y

1925: "Are you taking Betty to the Prom?"

1926: "No, Ed, old man—I'd rather go to Europe this summer."

—Yale Record.

Y-Y

Kind Old Gentleman (soothingly): "Did 'ums break 'ums little dolly?"

Sweet Little Girl: "Yes. Why in hell do they make the damn things so fragile, anyhow?"

—Yale Record.

Y-Y

"Hello, is this the Working Girls Home?"

"Yes."

"And do you try to save bad girls?"

"Yes!"

"Well, try your darndest to save me a couple for tomorrow night."

—Yellow Jacket.

Y-Y

"What's the idea of the 'Bon Ami' trade mark on your family's coat of arms?"

"Oh, that's father; he's a billiard shark."

—Juggler.

"Look, Papa, Abie's cold is cured and we still got left a box of cough-drops."

"Oo, vot extravagance! Tell Herman to go out and get his feet wet."

—Puppet.

Y-Y

It doesn't necessarily follow that a person who waits with bated breath has been eating fishworms.

—Sun Dial.

Y-Y

"Here! What do you mean by feeding that kid yeast cake?"

"Oh, he just swallowed fifty cents of mine and I'm trying to raise the dough."

—Wisconsin Octopus.

Y-Y

My roommate is such a sound sleeper that the sound keeps me awake.

—Yellow Jacket.

Y-Y

"How far do you get on a gallon?"

"All depends on what's in the gallon."

—Juggler.

Y-Y

"Man wants but little here below," remarked the dressmaker as he measured the length of the gown.

—Dirge.

Y-Y

Ave Atque Vale

We elected to spend four years with you, Carolina. We have spent those years, and in that time you have given us much, and you have taken much from us. In some part we are grateful and in some part we are resentful; but it does not matter so much now because the four years are gone, and henceforward we follow new trails. As to you, Carolina, you are an institution and must remain—remain for what? That is the question.

In all sincerity we hope that your remaining shall be worthy. It should; for you have every advantage. The backward element of your State is often antagonistic to you; the ignorant and the unintelligent look upon you with distrustful eye. For this thank God.

Your press-agents have performed a wonderful service; you are known over the whole world—and that fame has grown in a few short years. Your task lies in substantiating your reputation before the bubble bursts. To do this you must accomplish much.

You must realize that tradition does not cease to be vital with the death of one genius; that the wisdom of mind and the sweetness of soul that was the outspoken honesty of Edward Kidder Graham is still living in the half-shy but wholly sincere idealism of Harry Woodburn Chase. Bury thy dead, Carolina, and treasure the memory of yesteryear; but hearken to the singing of a new morning.

Grow greater, Carolina, not in physical size, but in works and thought. Be not content to be the superior of the nearer of your kind yet blind to those things wherein you fail to be a peer with the great.

We hope that there will come a day when no other University can even attempt to take from you an Edwin Greenlaw or an Archibald Henderson. Men of the stature of these two will carry you onward and upward by their presence; their absence will send you into decay.

Realize, Carolina, that democracy in a University is as fallacious as it is elsewhere; that there is an aristocracy of the mind, and one of the soul, and yet another of the body. The last you have recognized in your deference to the athlete; but when has the majority narrowness of your rule yielded to a greater individual intellect or broader vision?

Away with your jealousies and petty prejudices; cease enervating your organism with the letter of the law; recognize the individual voluntarily and gain thereby, lest recognition be forced from you to your irreparable loss.

Forsake your smallnesses and deceits, banish your egotism, and achieve to the greatness which is by right yours. Hail, Carolina, and Farewell!

S. M.

WON'T YOU COME IN?

THE C. H. & D. Bus Line was founded and, from the outset, the policy of a dependable schedule has been a characteristic peculiar to Pendergraft.

☞ Many additions have been made to the schedule, now 14 complete trips daily, and every one is dependable.

☞ The C. H. & D. Bus Line is bound up in the life of the University. Our drivers, capable and courteous, know your problems as students and they are dependable, too.

Printing that will always be a Cherished Possession

THE PRODUCTION of books, programs and calendars for the students of America's Universities requires an ability to originate printed forms that will be cherished possessions in the mellow years that follow a University career.

BEAUTIFUL forms and compositions are not made by chance, nor can they ever, in any material, be made at small expense.

A composition for cheapness and not for excellence of workmanship, is the most frequent and certain cause of the rapid decay and entire destruction of arts and manufactures.

— Ruskin

In the libraries of many of the "old grads" will be found books, programs and announcements preserved for their intimate memories and associations.

It is the production of this kind of printing that has brought to this organization its frequent opportunities to serve University men and women.

Are you looking into the future ?

WHEN planning your future, it is tremendously important that you consider what Life Insurance has to offer.

☞ Obligation is one of the things that always comes with the much-to-be-desired sheepskin. If not direct and personal financial obligation, then, most surely, obligation to the good old Dad who "saw you through." Should your banker offer to guarantee the payment of your obligations if you would agree to start a small interest-earning savings account with him, you would receive his proposition with open arms. Had it occurred to you that this is just what a life insurance company will do for you? A Pilot Life contract will guarantee your obligations, give you independence and prove a wonderful investment. See a representative of the Pilot Life; he will explain the details gladly and without obligating you in any way.

☞ If the important question of "what business shall I enter?" has not been decided, you should consider the possibilities of the life insurance business.

☞ Energy, ambition and educated minds are needed, and in no field are the opportunities greater for the college man. The life insurance business is a dignified and profitable profession and the field is not crowded. The future of the business is especially bright in the South.

I DO Housework

FOR A FEW CENTS a month I will bring you big returns. Not only do I yield work-free living — seven days to yourself instead of five — but I return much money in real, bankable dollars.

I am easy to hire, easy to get along with, do things your way, never try your temper, am dependable at all hours; I never quit, and the longer you keep me in your employ, the more I save and make for you.

I am working in your neighbor's home and making money for her! My name is "ELECTRICITY." Ask the woman who keeps house the electrical way. She knows.

You can have these facts verified and get further interesting information about me from your Electric Company, who has made my services available to you. An electrical housekeeping expert from this company will tell you, without cost or obligation, in a few minutes' time, exactly how I will work out in your home.

If you wish to have more leisure, extra money, more luxuries, phone for full particulars about me.

U. N. C. cannot lure 'em
From that "bully" town of Durham,
And that is why we lose this year
Ludlow Rogers, who's leaving here.

Greensboro has one claim to fame,
And that all lies in just one name:
Walter Robinson.

The Queen City has one boy
Who ought to be her pride and joy;
His name is William Summerville
But we all know him as plain "Bill."
He's always got a cheery smile,
The kind for which "you'd walk a mile."

A. T. HORTON
Fizzles is so very small
We hardly know he's here at all,
But when he opens up his face
You hear him o'er the whole darn place.

LEONARD HUGGINS
At baseball games he leads the cheers,
And jeers, and cheers, and jeers, and cheers.
